High court delays word on abortion decision

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court on Thursday prolonged the drama surrounding the fate of legal abortions, postponing until Monday any word in the most closely watched high court case of the decade.

In a brief and tranquil courtroom session, conducted while scores of partisans waited anxiously outside, Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist said the court's 1988-89 term will end Monday.

Before beginning their three-month summer recess, the justices must deal with three cases awaiting decision — including a Missouri dispute in which the court's 1973 decision legalizing abortion is under attack.

In each of the three cases, the court must announce a decision or order the case reargued. If it chooses the latter course, a new round of arguments would be held during the court term that begins in October, with announcement of a decision likely in 1990.

"What a letdown," said a young Capitol Hill intern who since 4 a.m. had waited in line for a courtroom seat.

Randall Terry, national director of an anti-abortion group called Operation Rescue, said the delay was frustrating. "Frankly, I just think they want to get the decision and get out of town," he said. "I mean, if I was a Supreme Court justice, I would throw the decision off the airplane as I was leaving the country."

On the court building's front steps, Olivia Gans of the National Right to Life Committee said, "It is difficult to wait ... but we remain optimistic."

Faye Wattleton, president of Planned Parenthood, said further delay would be "an indication of the turmoil that this court is willing to create in this country."

Court officials refused all comment on the prospect of a Monday decision in the Missouri case, which is called Webster vs. Reproductive Health Services. And in the absence of any hard facts, rumors abounded.

Thursday night, ABC News said unidentified sources told the network that Justice Harry Blackman, author of the 1973 opinion, had requested more time to complete a "bitter" opinion in opposition to one by Justice Sandra Day O'Connor. But this report did not say which way the court would rule.

There was no answer at the home of the court's press officer.

Abortion-rights advocates fear the court will order the Missouri case reargued next term and do so in a way that signals the justices are contemplating a major retreat from the 1973 ruling in Roe vs. Wade.

In that decision, the court said women have a constitutional right to abortion.

If reargument is ordered, the court also could agree to review up to three other abortion disputes pending before the justices. That would be read by some as a tip-off the court was on the verge of a sweeping ruling.

The three cases — from Illinois, Ohio and Minnesota — all involve state regulations making abortions harder to get.

The justices met behind closed doors in a regularly scheduled conference Thursday after their public session.

Roe vs. Wade itself was a case that had to be argued twice before a decision was announced. The court hears arguments in about 150 cases each term, and since 1977 has held over at least

State officials steering probes into sharp gasoline price jump

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — As motorists take to the roads for the July Fourth weekend, the heaviest driving time of the year, officials in a growing number of states – Idaho among them – are steering investigations into the possibility that oil companies used the Alaska oil spill to push gasoline prices higher.

The industry rejects any suggestion of collusion or price gouging, and the Bush administration has helped promote the companies' explanation that the big price rises following the March 24 Exxon Valdez spill were due to normal market forces.

But the size and speed of the price increases for two months following the accident triggered a level of public suspicion and outcry not seen in this country since the gasoline price spirals of 1974 and 1979.

"There was something very special about this leap in prices; it was the fastest and greatest increase in the history of the United States," said Trilby Lundberg of the Los Angeles-based Lundberg Survey, which tracks gasoline prices.

The Energy Department says the spill cut supplies of Alaskan crude oil by 13 million barrels over 13 days — not enough by itself to cause a major jump in gasoline prices. Critics contend the oil companies, seeing early signs of panic in the market, arbitrarily raised their prices to wholesalers, thus forcing up prices at the pump.

Lundberg does not believe the oil companies are guilty of gouging, but she says the increases — reaching about 20 percent in the first weeks after the Valdez spill — "jolted people in various walks of life" into thinking about it.

Many states have launched investigations into oil refiners' pricing practices, but none apparently has produced conclusive evidence of wrongdoing. Even so, some state officials have publicly accused the companies of manipulation.

"Greed and collusion are the only apparent explanations for these unwarranted price increases," Gray Davis, the California state controller, told a U.S. Senate hearing last April.

Joseph Koach, executive director of the Service Station Dealers of America, said in an interview that part of the problem in determining the legality or fairness of gasoline pricing is lack access to information about refiner costs.

"We just can't prove there's collusion; we can't prove there's price fixing," he said.

First major blaze of year under control

Forests dry, fire hazard high

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

OAKLEY – While officials warned that area forests are dry and fire hazard is high, 51 firefighters controlled the season's first major blaze late Thursday.

The Mahogany Butte fire southwest of Oakley was declared controlled at 6 p.m., said Ed Waldapfel, Forest Service spokesman.

The fire, whipped by 10-to-25-mph winds on Wednesday, scorched 250 acres of juniper, pinion pines and grass.

Firefighters dug firelines by hand through the night, encircling the fire by 8 a.m. Thursday, Waldapfel said. Fire Incident Commander Denny Schwarz declared the fire controlled at 6 p.m.

Fire crews from the Forest Service, and Bureau of Land Mangement crews from Shoshone and Burley fought the blaze after an Oakley resident reported it Wednesday afternoon. Firefighters also used one helicopter and seven pieces of ground equipment.

Waldapfel said the fire and dry conditions could foreshadow a bad fire season.

"To have a fire of this size usually doesn't happen until middle of July," Waldapfel said.

But forests are almost as dry as they were at this time last year, he said. Last summer was one of Idaho's worst fire seasons in a decade.

"We've had a lot of wind this spring that has dried out a lot of our larger fuels," he said.

And the irony of a wet spring could further fuel the fire season, Waldapfel said. Spring rains grow lots of grass, which is starting to dry out, he said.

Campers need to be careful, especially during the Fourth of July weekend, Waldapfel said. It's a crime to even carry fireworks on public land.

"I think the key is just to be aware of the fact that even though it looks green out there, it will burn," Waldapfel said.

He asked campers to douse fires carefully. Wood cutters should wait for 15 to 20 minutes before leaving their wood-cutting area to make sure no sparks have kindled a fire, he said.

Session subjects still open

The Associated Press

BOISE — If there is a special session of the Idaho Legislature this fall, Gov. Cecil Andrus says he hasn't ruled out anything that might be put before the lawmakers.

"I have not rejected anything," he said Thursday, when asked if the subject of a tax rebate might be put on the agenda.

Before deciding on the agenda for a special session, the governor said he will confer with legislative leaders.

"I will listen to the leadership," he said. "We'll decide what we are going to do."

Andrus estimates there will be a surplus up to $50 million when the state closes its budget year this weekend. He has stated in the past that he might call a special session this fall, if there is enough money available, to pay off a 20-year bond issue used to finance construction of a new building on the Boise State University campus.

Officials have estimated the state could save $8.5 million by paying off the $5 million bond issue now instead of over many years.

"If they come to town I would want them to come to town on very few topics, have a one-day session, basically have their minds made up, get in, get out, and save the state some money," the governor said.

"We have plenty of time to decide what we need to do," Andrus said, when asked if a rebate of at least some of the $50 million surplus was a possibility.

But he hinted he might not favor a rebate.

"In my administrations, we have always looked at the long-term effect of what you do with that money. You can't go from feast to famine in one year and not terrorize the public.

The governor said there are a lot of possibilities that could come before the special session. "I've thought about these things in my own mind, but I haven't rejected anything," he said.

U.S. foreign debt burden rises to $532.5 billion, fuels debate

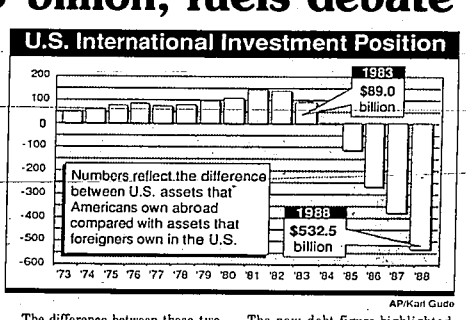

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States, already the world's largest debtor nation, strengthened its hold on that dubious title in 1988 as its foreign debt surged 41 percent to $532.5 billion, the government said Thursday.

The Commerce Department, releasing its annual balance sheet on America's global economic standing, said the U.S. debt burden had risen by $154.2 billion in 1988, up from $378.3 billion in debt to foreigners the United States owed at the end of 1987.

The figures mean that foreigners own more in U.S. assets than Americans own abroad. The report was certain to fuel the already heated debate over whether the United States is losing control of its economic destiny to foreigners.

Last year, the government said that foreign holdings in the United States increased 15.4 percent, to $1.786 trillion. American investments abroad rose a smaller 7.2 percent, to $1.253 trillion.

AP/Karl Gude

The difference between those two figures represents the United State's net debtor position.

Britain remained the country with the largest stake in the United States, with $101.9 billion in direct investment holdings, up 28 percent from 1987. Japan moved into second place with $53.3 billion in direct holdings, up a sharp 52 percent from 1987.

The new debt figure highlighted the speed at which America's debt is piling up.

As recently as 1983, the United States was the world's largest creditor nation with an investment surplus of $89 billion. That surplus fell to $3.3 billion in 1984 and disappeared in 1985, when the country became a net debtor for the first time in 71 years.

Former deputy clerk draws jail sentence

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – A judge, admitting torment over testimony that he may be sentencing an innocent woman, ordered a former deputy county clerk to spend at least 30 days in jail on charges she embezzled $40 of county money.

Fifth District Magistrate Judge R. Michael Redman entered his judgment after nearly an hour of arguments that somebody else could have stolen the money Janet Sidwell, 38, pleaded guilty to embezzling.

"I have come within an inch of ordering that this defendant's plea be withdrawn and set this case for trial," Redman said.

But Sidwell, 11-year veteran of the Twin Falls County recorder's office, had made her choice, the judge said.

"Now I must make mine," he said.

Redman sentenced Sidwell to 90 days in the county jail, suspended 60 days and ordered her to pay $40 resitution. When Sidwell is released from jail, she will be on a two-year probation.

Redman said he decided on the sentence, stiff by petty theft standards, partly because of the "unusual number of embezzlement cases" in Twin Falls.

"It's a form of theft that unfortunately has become rampant in our community," Redman said.

Sidwell was motionless in a quiet, small courtroom with a few friends, her son and her attorney, Walt Sinclair. Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter was attending a different court hearing and sent no deputy to Sidwell's hearing.

Baxter had earlier recommended in writing that Sidwell reimburse the county $40, forfeit remaining vacation time and quit her job. Baxter made no recommendations on whether Redman should sentence Sidwell to jail or impose a fine.

After Redman announced his sentence and ordered Sidwell immediately to jail, the former deputy clerk and her friends drew close and talked. She hugged her son, wiping a tear from her eye.

After the hearing, she maintained her innocence even though she pleaded guilty to one petty theft charge.

"I don't think the judge was that fair," she said.

Redman called her position "unique."

"I don't think I've ever known a criminal case where I've known a person who believed she was innocent come in and plead guilty," Redman said during the sentencing hearing.

"She doesn't have the money to prove she didn't do it," answered Sinclair, Sidwell's attorney.

"Obviously, I am not God and I don't know what the truth is," Redman said minutes before announcing his sentence. He had offered Sidwell the option of withdrawing her plea, but she didn't.

"I can only take her at her word," Redman said, and sentenced Sidwell "with no joy whatsoever."

During testimony at the 1½-hour hearing, a deputy clerk who had worked with Sidwell testified that several people had access to the $40 Sidwell was charged with stealing. She was a clerk in the Twin Falls County recorder's office, under the direction of County Clerk Richard Pence.

Sidwell's charges stemmed from $40 in cash from a January transaction that Sidwell handled. The transaction was never recorded in the county's books.

Four people have access to the county's computer system in the recorder's office, one place where transactions are recorded, said Marjorie Annis, who worked with Sidwell in the recorder's office for 12 years. The "entire office" has access to the office's cash box, Annis said.

"Even though she was charged, there were four to five other people who had access to that money?" Redman asked Annis.

"Yes," Annis said.

"The issue is here, we don't know who's on trial – if it's Janet Sidwell or the recorder's office," Sinclair said.

Sinclair said after the hearing that he "would have preferred she would have fought" the charges.

Public outcry – like that expressed in letters published in the Times-News, affected Redman, Sinclair said.

"I don't think she would have done any jail time otherwise," he said.

Surgery seeks source of infection

HONOLULU (AP) — Former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos, battling for his life against multiple organ failure, underwent surgery Thursday to pinpoint the source of a life-threatening infection.

St. Francis Medical Center spokeswoman Norma Kop declined to say why surgery was being performed, but Marcos' son Ferdinand Jr. said the 90-minute operation was to find whether a transplanted kidney was causing the infection.

The 71-year-old exiled leader, hospitalized since Jan. 15, suffered liver failure Wednesday and ran a fever as high as 104 degrees, said assistant hospital administrator Eugene Tiwanak.

Suspect arrested in tree poisoning

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A man was arrested and charged with felony criminal mischief Thursday in the poisoning of the historic, centuries-old Treaty Oak tree during what police described as a ritual.

The culprit may have been trying to use magic to cast a spell to protect a woman or because of a rivalry over a woman, according a report in Wednesday's Austin-American Statesman, which cited sources it did not identify.

Police Sgt. John Jones said in the arrest warrant that Paul Cullen poisoned the Treaty Oak "in a ritual" with the herbicide Velpar. The warrant said Cullen got the herbicide from his job at a farm and ranch supply business.

Cullen, 45, was arrested in Elroy, a town south of Austin, and was held in lieu of $20,000 bond; police said.

Bush, GOP leaders agree on words

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush and congressional Republican leaders agreed Thursday on their version of a constitutional amendment to overturn the Supreme Court ruling that allows flag burning.

The amendment would read:

"The Congress and the states shall have power to prohibit the physical desecration of the flag of the United States."

Bush will endorse the amendment language in a ceremony today at the Iwo Jima Memorial, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

Agencies must brace for budget cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration on Thursday ordered domestic agencies to prepare for budget cuts of 5 percent after next year because current deficit-reduction plans won't meet future targets.

"It will ... be necessary to present the president with options for further spending reductions," said Richard Darman, the president's budget director, in a memo to department heads.

Fiscal 1991 budgets submitted for White House approval must include not only the spending levels they'd like to see but also a freeze and a 5 percent reduction, he said.

one case each year for reargument the following term.

The 1973 ruling said a woman's decision to have an abortion during the first three months of pregnancy must be left to her and her doctor. It said states may regulate abortions during the second trimester only to protect the woman's health, and may take steps to protect fetal life in the third trimester.

State authority to regulate abortions after the first trimester was not made absolute, however.

In the past decade, about 1.5 million legal abortions have been performed each year.

If Roe vs. Wade were reversed, states would be free to stringently regulate — or even outlaw — abortion.

In the two decisions the court did announce Thursday, it:

•Gave public officials more authority to ban advertising and sales pitches — including "Tupperware parties" in college dormitories. The 6-3 ruling in a New York case significantly limited commercial free speech.

•Limited, in a case from Washington state, the power of Indian tribes to control, through tribal zoning laws, the use of land owned by non-Indians within a reservation's boundaries.

The two other cases in which decisions are pending include an important church-state dispute from Pittsburgh focusing on holiday displays of a Christmas Nativity scene and a Hanukkah menorah at government buildings.

plus some U.S. Senators, have called on the Justice Department to investigate.

Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Neb., in May asked the department and the Federal Trade Commission to investigate what he called "a possible abuse that could cost American consumers millions of dollars." The FTC declined, saying in a letter to Kerrey that "available information does not indicate that such violations have occurred or are occurring."

A Kerrey aide said this week that the Justice Department had not replied.

Prices at the pump have leveled off in recent weeks and now stand at a nationwide average of $1.17 a gallon, up from $1.00 in mid-March, a week before the spill, according to the Lundberg Survey of 12,000 stations.

The oil industry says the price rises were due to a combination of factors unrelated to marketing efforts.

Among the reasons cited: a normal seasonal rise in gasoline demand, higher prices for the crude oil used to produce gasoline, tougher environental rules for gasoline that raise refiners' manufacturing costs, and higher state taxes on gasoline.

Yet inquiries into the pricing practices of oil refiners are moving ahead, and in some states service station dealers are pressing for legislative action.

A trade group of station dealers in Washington state is launching a statewide petition drive over the Fourth of July weekend seeking a law that would place oil refiners and their product prices under state public utility controls.

Washington was among seven states whose attorneys general or their deputies held meetings in May with oil company officials to investigate the reasons for the stunning prices increases following the Alaska spill.

Those officials — from Oregon, California, Idaho, North Dakota, Alaska and Indiana, plus Washington — expressed concern about possible oil company collusion, but they said more information was needed.

In Massachusetts, a special panel of state legislators and officials of the state Office of Energy Resources, held public hearings last week as part of its own investigation of gasoline pricing.

Judge refuses to disqualify himself

REXBURG (AP) — Seventh District Judge Grant Young has refused to disqualify himself from a legal battle involving West One Bank and the owners of an Idaho Falls farm equipment whose assets the bank seized in 1987.

Young denied a motion for disqualification made by David Steed and Associates, saying granting the motion would "amount to an abdication of the court's statutory duties since no compelling constitutional, statutory or ethical grounds exist for disqualification."

Ida Leggett, attorney for Steed and his partners, Claren and Del Ray Holm, alleged in her motion for disqualification that Young engaged in one-sided contact with the bank on three occasions in May and June.

Paradis wants conviction thrown out

COEUR d'ALENE (AP) — Donald Paradis has asked a 1st District judge to throw out his Idaho conviction and death sentence in the strangling death of a Spokane woman.

New York attorney Edwin Matthews Jr. on Wednesday filed Paradis' petition for post-conviction relief, contending a forensic pathologist who testified in his trial changed his testimony six years later in the trial of an alleged accomplice, resulting in the man's acquittal on the same charge of first-degree murder.

Paradis and Thomas Gibson were convicted in separate trials of killing Kimberly Ann Palmer. Both defendants received death sentences, which are on appeal in the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Friends of Lime Creek win victory

BOISE (AP) — Boise sportsman Gary Richardson, who learned to fly fish on Lime Creek near Featherville, has persuaded the Sawtooth National Forest to drop two timber sales from his favorite stream.

According to an appeal settlement, the Sawtooth Forest agreed to drop the Deer Park and Presidential Creek timber sales — at Lime Creek's headwaters, but reserved the right to log in Whitney Creek, another tributary.

The agency also recognized the stream supports "excellent populations" of wild trout and agreed to fund water-quality studies for the Lime Creek drainage during various runoff levels.

Jeff Fereday, who represented Richardson in the year-long appeal negotiation, said Richardson and the 100-member Friends of Lime Creek group are "generally very pleased" with the outcome.

Grant will help cheese plant workers

POCATELLO (AP) — The state Department of Employment has received a $584,000 federal grant to help workers at the bulk cheese plant in Pocatello that will close down next spring.

The Labor Department money will be used to help workers find new jobs when the Kraft operations are moved to Tulare, Calif., next year. The plant currently employs about 480 full-and part-time workers.

Ore-Ida Foods Inc. announced earlier this year that it is considering purchasing the Kraft facility for a specialty frozen foods production line. That proposal is near being finalized.

Board to review demotions, firing

COEUR d'ALENE (AP) — The Coeur d'Alene School Board has agreed to review decisions by a previous board to demote four administrators and to fire Coeur d'Alene High School Principal Warren Toney.

"In view of all the water that's gone under the bridge, it does make sense to take another look at this," Trustee Tim Olson said this week. "As new board members, we want to be fully aware of why these personnel decisions were made."

Smith's threatens to leave Boise

BOISE (AP) — If Smith's Food King does not win city approval to build a new store in Boise's "Bench" area, it will close all of its stores in town, Smith's Vice President Tom Welch says.

That would mean canceling recently announced plans for a big new store on Fairview Avenue, he said. "If we can't (build on the Bench), we won't build another store, and we'll leave Boise."

Smith's has proposed a new store at Vista Avenue and Overland Road, but has run into opposition from nearby neighbors. It also was voted down by the Boise Planning and Zoning Commission. The site is directly across the street from an existing Albertson's supermarket.

Clean Lakes Act takes effect soon

COEUR d'ALENE (AP) — North Idaho's Clean Lakes Act goes into effect Saturday and could prove an important link between government and the public in protecting the state's waterways.

But an Idaho water quality expert says it takes money along with public sentiment to undo man's contamination.

The act, introduced by Sen. Mary Lou Reed, D-Coeur d'Alene, creates a regional coordinating council that receives information from a public advisory committee and a technical one. The law affects the lakes in the five northernmost counties for now.

Rush argues for realistic open records law

BOISE (AP) — Any new state law on open records should consider the "realities" of the day-to-day operations of state agencies, state Agriculture Director Richard Rush said Thursday.

If new laws are passed on public access to agency records, Rush told a legislative committee, the agency should not be "put into the position of having to disregard daily operations ...to satisfy the requirements of the public records law."

Rush was among state agency officials testifying before a legislative committee on public records.

The panel is pondering whether to consolidate or change the more than 100 state laws on public records. Most grant specific exemptions, and officials testifying during the two-day meeting urged the panel to retain them.

Rush said there are five state laws granting confidentiality for his agency's records. Some of them cover specific financial information from private companies, such as under the Bonded Warehouse Law, the Commodity Dealer's Law and the Commercial Fertilizer Law.

Product information and trade secrets also are covered under the Dairies and Dairy Products Law and the Dealers in Farm Produce Law, Rush said.

He urged the panel to approve similar open-records exemptions covering pesticides and marketing promotion. The bureau enforcing pesticide laws has authority to impose both criminal and civil penalties for other violations, he said, yet has none of the protections on its investigative records granted to law enforcement agencies.

Stan Hamilton, director of the state Department of Lands, said his agency would like protection from disclosing land appraisals until a transactions is complete or the Land Board abandons the proposal.

If the state has to make public its appraisals, but the other side does not, "that puts us at a definite disadvantage in negotiations," he said.

After a full day of testimony Thursday, it appeared there was little agreement how lawmakers should sort out the numerous laws on public records.

Three bills aimed at consolidating exemptions from open-records requirements or streamlining the access process were introduced in the House State Affairs Committee last session, but died there.

Andrus criticizes circuit court judges; incorrectly claims GOP responsible

BOISE (AP) — No matter who appointed them, Gov. Cecil Andrus says he does not agree with judges of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals who struck down Arizona's death penalty laws.

Idaho's law is almost identical, and the state's top legal officials say it's possible that the state will not be able to carry out executions unless the U.S. Supreme Court overturns the federal appeals court ruling.

In an exchange of letters with Attorney General Jim Jones earlier in the week on the subject, Andrus blamed judges appointed by "a Republican president" for the endless delays which have prevented Idaho and other states from carrying out their death penalty laws.

"The members of the Ninth Circuit, which has caused much of the turmoil in interpreting this law, were not appointed by this governor but by a Republican president as were the two federal judges (Ryan and U.S. District Judge Marion Callister) who continue to rely upon that decision — the Arizona decision — to stay executions every time it's requested of them," Andrus told Jones.

However, information provided to The Associated Press from San Francisco, headquarters of the Ninth Circuit, shows the seven federal appeals judges who voted to overturn the Arizona death penalty law were appointed by Democrat Jimmy Carter.

Andrus said he may have been mistaken, but his sentiment has not changed.

"I don't care who appointed them. I don't agree with their decision," the governor said. "Neither does the Supreme Court."

He was referring to a recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling in a Florida case which attorneys contend erased the bulk of the impact of the Arizona case.

Rose flap reflects our interpretations of gambling

Richard E. Vatz
Lee S. Weinberg

The Pete Rose case has thrown in doubt the fate of Rose and the power of the baseball commissioner.

But there is little doubt as to the use mental health professionals and Rose's supporters will make of his gambling: It will serve as a psychiatric rescue of Rose's reputation, an attempt to reconcile his hero status with his flouting of the rules written to guarantee the integrity of the game he claims to love.

Early in the Rose controversy, Arnold Wexler, executive director of the Council on Compulsive Gambling of New Jersey, predicted to the Philadelphia Daily News that Pete Rose "will do for compulsive gambling what Betty Ford did for alcoholism.

Gambling can be viewed "medically" as a "disease," however, only by the circular reasoning that anything medical doctors investigate, even self-gratifying behavior, can be seen as a matter of health or illness.

The public generally thinks of illness as involving some physical or biological dysfunction or imbalance. In that sense "pathological gambling" is simply not an illness and involves no biochemical changes.

Why is the public willing, although less so in recent years, to accept unsubstantiated medical explanations to account for why people have ruined their lives?

Part of the answer is fairly simple: If medical doctors indicate that self-destructive behavior is a medical problem, the tendency is to accept with little question the word of the medical expert.

Moreover, much of the public's access to the issue of compulsive gambling comes from feature-type segments of print and broadcast news, segments almost invariably lacking the journalistic skepticism that routinely accompanies other investigations, such as political or consumer issues. Journalists unsophisticated in psychiatric coverage and scientific method are typically unaware of the sometimes biased nature of psychiatric claims.

But the major reason the public is so willing to believe that excessive gambling is an uncontrollable illness is that such a view relieves the profound incredulity created when people, especially famous people, act in a way that results in consequences they surely would wish to avoid.

The more familiar the public is with a particular behavior, the less likely it is to be mystifying and to receive public sympathy. For example, the claim by Boston Red Sox star Wade Boggs (as well as psychiatrists' efforts) that "sexual addiction" was responsible for his affair was greeted with a near-unanimous guffaw.

When baseball's verdict on Pete Rose is finally determined, there may be a similar explosion of articles. But the full story of his gambling and personal consequences will probably, or at least should, yield substantially less sympathy.

House leadership changes prove a political watershed

Lynne Brown

The Democrats in the House have filled the holes in their leadership lineup left by the sudden departure of Speaker Jim Wright and Majority Whip Tony Coelho. Thomas S. Foley of Washington, the No. 2 man in the House hierarchy, moved up uncontested to take Wright's place. Richard A. Gephardt of Missouri, one-time and perhaps future presidential aspirant, was chosen to replace Foley as majority leader. Pennsylvania Rep. William H. Gray III, in a tougher race, was elected whip.

The spring of 1989 has been a bruising political season for House Democrats. But the selection of these new party leaders leaves a more enduring legacy:

•Control of House leadership has shifted to a new generation.

Wright, who ascended to the Speakership barely two and and half years ago, was expected to hold that job for at least a decade (as did his predecessor, Thomas P. O'Neill) before stepping down.

The new Speaker is the first to have come of age politically after World War II, and his outlook is that of a post-Depression era Democrat. He is also the first Speaker to hail from the "newest" part of the United States — the Far West.

Gephardt, 48, and Gray, 47, were born in the year the United States entered World War II and came to Congress in the wake of Watergate.

As befits politicians of the '80s, they practice an individualistic brand of campaigning and come across well on TV.

•The leadership ladder by which Democrats traditionally have moved up the ranks is in danger of collapsing. If in the past the leadership game in the House resembled a relay race with the baton passed in orderly fashion from one runner to another, in the future it could look more like a scrimmage as determined competitors scuffle with each other for position in a wide open field.

The unexpected political demise of both Wright and Coelho has done more than free up a couple of rungs on the leadership ladder; it has weakened the ladder itself. The new majority leader and whip, rising to their posts as they have in haste and in a climate of strain and confusion, cannot lay as firm a "claim" on their jobs as did their predecessors.

After all, uncommon times rather than business as usual brought them to their positions on the ladder. Depending on their subsequent performance, they could be vulnerable to challenge.

•Congress is like other organizations: If you change the methods of recruitment and advancements you wind up with different sorts of people at the helm.

Up until a few years ago, the whip — widely considered the first rung on the leadership ladder — was appointed by the Speaker and majority leader. They tended to select as their lieutenants like-minded individuals of similar political backgrounds who professed loyalty to the House and displayed a measure of deference to established leaders and norms.

In an effort to broaden the base of political power in the House, younger Democrats pushed to have the whip made elective, i.e., open to a vote of the caucus. They succeeded, and in 1987 Coelho became the first elected whip.

Coelho himself presaged a new approach to leadership. His campaign for whip was a late 20th century model of high-tech, entrepreneurial politics and was a prototype for further multi-candidate contests in the House, both Democratic and Republican.

The very qualities that made Coelho a successful candidate for whip — he was highly organized, aggressive, able to build an independent base of support (including a financial base) — might have worked against him if he had been appointed to the job. Established leaders do not like to have to keep looking over their shoulders at potential competitors.

All of these trends — younger members moving into the leadership circle, more frequent and competitive races for party posts, a circumscribed role for established leaders in tapping future leaders — may signal an era of renewed vigor and vision for the House. But a few questions linger.

First, can highly charged and highly ambitious leaders develop the skills of collegiality and consensus-building needed to pull together the disparate elements of the Democratic coalition?

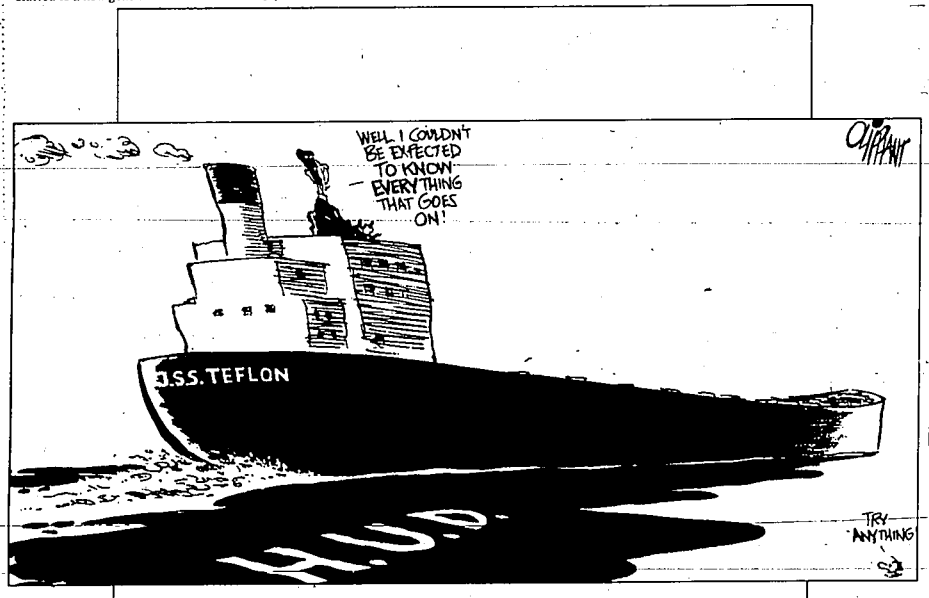

A second concern: Will leaders who seek a career beyond the House be properly protective of the institution and its prerogatives? If their plans include a bid for national office, will they seek to shape the congressional party agenda to their own ends?

Finally, will the declining role of party elders in choosing their successors remove a valuable filter for deciding who can best advance the interests of the party and the institution? This parallels a concern on the national level that Democratic party regulars and office holders are not accorded a large enough role in choosing nominees for president.

It is useful to note that the two House leaders who relinquished their posts both gained their first leadership jobs by election, not by appointment: Coelho, who was the Democrats' first elected whip, and Wright, who made a successful lateral grab onto the leadership ladder in 1976 in a hard-fought contest for majority leader.

Foley, in his own words, is the "last of the Mohicans" — a Democratic leader who has risen by the established route of succession from appointed whip to majority leader and now to Speaker. Watching Gephardt and Gray will yield valuable clues as to what the new faces — and the new forces — of House leadership hold for the future.

Farmers National not at fault

Here we go again with the dairy subject. This time the dairy owner makes the bank smell worse than the cow's manure!

It was hard to believe what I read about Mr. Cotta's winning in court because the bank had sold some mastitis-infected cows that caused his dairy the enormous loss he's claiming to have had.

The fact that any dairy with a somatic cell count of three million or more, as his was before he bought these few cows, has to be in very poor shape and very afflicted with mastitis.

He knew what he was buying, as he bought them for the price of beef, yet he believed he could make some profit out of them. He was told by the bank people what he was buying, and now, he blames Farmers National Bank for his losses! This is absurd!

What is wrong with the system?

Why don't they carefully choose a jury that knows more about dairies, cow diseases, why some dairies go bankrupt like this dairy went (the original one), and more about the accuser's and defendants' reputation?

I cannot see Farmers National Bank losing on this one! These people try to help the dairymen as much as they can so the dairymen can succeed.

Sure, they have to be cautious, after they find out to what extremes people will go to, only to get what they want — easy money.

Either the Buhl or Wendell Branch have super representatives, and they'll do their best for the best interest of our business — we won't find any other bank that will help us like they will.

Agriculture and dairying is one of the best sources of income in this valley, and I know that most of us dairymen wouldn't be able to call ourselves dairymen if it weren't for Farmers National Bank and its officers.

A few friends that can't express their feelings on paper, and myself, hope that the bank appeals this case and wins it! It's only fair!

When I was in school, a friend of mine disliked the dairy work at home so he went to law school and made it. Well, a couple of years at the job he got so tired of the dishonesty in the system itself, and by being asked to represent the obviously guilty ones, that he asked his dad if he would please let him return to the dairy.

This was twelve years ago. He's still there and tells me he sleeps much better.

As for Mr. Cotta if he wins — let me repeat what my mother's old and still new saying was, "What is poorly chewed is poorly swallowed," and sooner or later will affect you.

'Good life' may be poor choice

I would like to compliment investigative reporter, N.S. Nokkentved upon the thoroughness and comprehensiveness of the on-going articles concerning SIS and DOE at the INEL for the enlightenment of the public.

The facts that Nokkentved has revealed also reveal a sinister underlying thread that in itself is frightening, to wit: that when any branch of government can lie to the extent that DOE apparently has and continues to compound that lie by having audacity to set up a propaganda office in cities throughout the state in order to still get their way with the knowledge and consent of the elected congressman that the people of Idaho sent to Washington to represent the welfare and best interest of Idaho, it is alarming.

It is particularly alarming in view of the revelations that have come and are still coming to light concerning the Congress of the United States as to their blatant acts of dishonesty, integrity, justice and morality than at any time in the history of the United States.

Some people indulgently say, "Oh people are people. They are no worse now than they have ever been." That statement is and always has been an excuse to lull you into a lethargic never, never, land.

Before you decide to rebutt with that cliche, sit down with the history books and then decide whether you want to take a liberal viewpoint or face the truth.

How many believe that a re-enactment of the present China scenario could at some time and point in the future happen in our land?

If you want to take the risk, continue to fail to exercise your right to vote intelligently and to use the power that the founders of our government gave to you.

To those who wish to make a "pooh-pooh" rebuttal, go back to the history books and the Bible and know that since the beginning of time mankind has sought to enslave his brother. Our forefathers had a bitter taste of this fact in the old world.

When they came to the new world the Constitution they drew and the government they formed had the safeguards incorporated within the system to prevent these facts from being re-enacted in the United States.

It is my opinion that through our profound and dedicated pursuit of the easy life, the so-called "good life" that we are in the process of selling our birthright by failing to police and demand proper moral performance from those we elect to administer and safeguard that birthright.

SIS threatens Idaho lifestyle

In reply to the letter of Mr. C. Ed Fend: I, too, hope that the final decision regarding SIS will be based on reason and good sense.

If it is, it will never be constructed. I cannot think of one "sensible" reason to substantiate the construction of SIS and only the "lunatic fringe" would think it good sense to proceed with it.

Mr. Fend, if you are truly thinking of your fellow citizens, not only in other states, but this one, you would surely think of those downwind and downstream from the INEL site and work to clean up the contamination at the site before even thinking of creating more.

Thankfully, there are a few of our political leaders who feel that the SIS project is not needed at the present time.

I feel that the waste in taxpayer dollars and the very inevitable potential hazards which would result from the construction of SIS far outweigh any economic gains you would receive, Mr. Fend.

Most Idahoans have chosen to live and work here because they enjoy its great beauty and healthy environment. I hope that as "a concerned citizen" of Idaho, you will try to help us keep it that way.

Court gives officials power to ban ads

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court issued a free-speech ruling Thursday that gives public officials more power to ban advertising and sales pitches — including peddling cookware in college dormitories.

Justice Antonin Scalia, writing for the court in a 6-3 decision, said government restrictions on commercial speech may be valid even if they "go beyond the least restrictive means to achieve the desired end."

As long as the rules are "reasonable (and) narrowly tailored to achieve the desired objective ... we leave it to governmental decision makers to judge what manner of regulation may best be employed," Scalia said.

By contrast, the least-restrictive test remains in force for other forms of expression — particularly political speech.

The court acted in the case of a ban on cookware sales on campuses of the State University of New York, SUNY.

While the justices said university officials may place some restrictions on commercial activity on campus, they left unanswered another issue raised by the case — whether the university's ban is too broad because it also limits non-commercial speech.

The justices said a lower court should study that issue.

The three dissenters, Justices Harry A. Blackmun, William J. Brennan and Thurgood Marshall, said the rules involving non-commercial speech do go too far.

Blackmun said the ban could prevent a student from meeting his doctor or lawyer in his dorm room if the doctor or lawyer is paid for the visit. It could even prevent a student from paying a music teacher or a speech therapist to come to the dorm room for tutoring, Blackmun said.

The court, he said, is turning its back on its own free-speech precedents.

"The majority holds that 'least-restrictive means' annlysis does not apply to commercial speech cases, a holding it is able to reach only by recasting a good bit of contrary language in our past cases," Blackmun said.

However, Scalia said Thursday's ruling was in line with a 1986 decision that allowed Puerto Rico to ban advertising promoting casino gambling that was aimed at Puerto Rican residents.

Scalia also cited a week-old ruling in which the court made it easier for communities to turn down the volume at rock concerts. In that decision, the court upheld a New York City rule that rock-concert sponsors use a sound system operated by a city-designated engineer.

The SUNY board of trustees adopted a rule in 1966 to prohibit most commercial enterprises from operating on campuses.

The ban was challenged by American Future Systems Inc., a housewares company in Bryn Mawr, Pa., after one of its representatives was arrested in 1982 at the campus in Cortland, N.Y., for refusing to leave a dorm.

The housewares company attracts customers by offering free Florida vacations to students who arrange sales demonstrations in their dorm.

Chicago cigarette tax will help provide shelters for homeless

CHICAGO (AP) — Smokers will be coughing up an extra penny a pack to improve life for the city's estimated 35,000 homeless people under an unusual measure expected to raise $1.8 million a year for shelter programs.

Advocates for the homeless Thursday applauded the increase in the city's 15-cent cigarette tax, but the tobacco industry complained that smokers shouldn't have to bear the brunt of funding social programs.

The increase won unanimous approval Wednesday from the City Council and is scheduled to take effect July 29.

"Because it is summertime, a lot of people forget about the homeless because they say it's warm outside," said Alderman Luis V. Gutierrez, who co-sponsored the measure. "But this is the perfect time to do this, so we have time to prepare for the winter."

Revenue generated by the 1-cent tax increase — projected to amount to $900,000 for the remainder of this year and up to $1.8 million annually thereafter — will go to shelters that receive funding from the city's Department of Human Services.

About 35 of the city's 53 shelters will benefit, said Francis Tobin, housing organizer for the Chicago Coalition for the Homeless, a non-profit advocacy group that lobbied heavily for the measure.

"It will mean beds and food, but more importantly it will mean support services in the shelters, like transportation to the welfare office, to job interviews, and housing relocation assistance" for homeless people, Tobin said in a telephone interview Thursday.

He said the measure is "a step in the right direction."

House OKs China sanctions over Bush's plea

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House on Thursday unanimously adopted new sanctions against China in response to the brutal crackdown on pro-democracy demonstrators, ignoring Bush administration objections that the move will limit the president's flexibility.

President Bush already has condemned the violence in China, halted all military aid and banned exchanges of military officials and high-level visits.

The House package endorsed those moves and went a step farther, adding suspension of trade and development programs, a ban on the sale of police equipment and a limit on transfer of high-technology and nuclear materials or components.

"The Chinese leadership should be aware there is a very deep-seated revulsion in Congress about the barbarian tactics they have employed," said Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich., who helped draft the sanctions.

He said the move, on a vote of 418-0, "does send a very strong message to China: America is not going to give you all kinds of economic benefits as long as you are slaughtering your young."

The sanctions were adopted as part of a two-year, $22.8 billion foreign aid bill that provides military, economic and development assistance for friendly nations in fiscal years 1990 and 1991.

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., noted that the administration opposed the sanctions as robbing it of flexibility and an infringement on presidential foreign policy prerogatives.

But he added: "I think someone in this government — and today it's the House — has to speak clearly on behalf of the American people and take more forceful action than the president and the secretary of state have been to date willing to take."

Gephardt said the legislation sends a message to Chinese leaders that "the whole world is watching you. Don't try to rewrite history" by denying the brutality, as official government statements have done. "Return to the community of nations by ceasing the brutal repression of your own people. Stop the killing now."

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., agreed that Congress and the president should speak with one voice. But he noted "there is a strong demand in the House" to register anger over the crackdown and contended the move would not be at odds with Bush's policies.

"I think the administration can live with this amendment," Foley said.

HUD chicanery still surfacing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A onetime broker for the Department of Housing and Urban Development in Buffalo, N.Y., withheld payments, overbilled and paid himself advances, so when he died in 1987 he owed the department almost $73,000, according to a federal audit.

After Bernard A. Brady died, his widow continued to withdraw money from his HUD escrow account, according to the audit, obtained under the Freedom of Information Act.

Brady had been a closing agent on the sale of single-family HUD homes and manager of at least one HUD rental property, said the audit by HUD's office of inspector general. He died May 10, 1987, but while the audit was being conducted, his widow, Maureen, somehow withdrew $20,100 from the HUD account in her husband's name, said A. Paul Kane, HUD's regional inspector general for audit, who oversaw the probe.

"We don't know whether she was forging the checks ... or whether they had a book of pre-signed checks," Kane said in an interview from HUD's Region II office in New York City.

Brady had comingled personal and HUD funds in the account, Kane said Thursday. No criminal charges against Mrs. Brady are anticipated since she recently agreed through her lawyer to pay the $24,832 HUD says she and her husband's estate owe, Kane said.

"We expect to get it all back," he said.

Baker criticizes latest sanctions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III, disapproving of moves in Congress for separate sanctions against China, said Thursday that U.S. foreign policy cannot be guided entirely by human rights considerations.

He urged Congress to work out a compromise with the White House that preserves President Bush's flexibility in framing a U.S. response to the crackdown on pro-democracy forces and permits the United States to speak with one voice.

Baker said Bush, who headed the U.S. liaison office in Beijing from 1974 to 1975, knows as much about China as any elected official. "We do recognize the desire of elected officials to speak to this and to vote on this issue," Baker said at a White House news conference.

"But we really and firmly believe that the leadership in this instance must come from the executive branch and it should come from the president of the United States as commander-in-chief and as one who is thoroughly and completely versed in the affairs of China."

Therefore, Baker said, the Bush administration could not endorse the package of sanctions being put together on Capitol Hill to register congressional concern over a wave of arrests and executions.

JAMES BAKER
Blasts moves by Congress

Even though Bush and Baker have expressed outrage over developments in China, including the attack by the military on students in Tiananmen Square June 3-4, several members of Congress have exhorted them to take stronger action and make more damning statements.

But Baker said "we will not use inflammatory rhetoric."

He said U.S.-Chinese relations served a variety of purposes and should not be jettisoned as a response to the crackdown.

"The principle of human rights has to be a major foundation principle for our foreign policy," Baker said. "It has been, it continues to be, and in my view it will continue to be well into the future. That is a very, very important principle."

But, he said, "it is not the only principle which determines our foreign policy. And it is not, and cannot be, the sole and only principle which determines the extent and scope and degree of the response."

Bush meets Zaire President Mobutu

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush on Thursday praised Zaire President Mobutu Sese Seko for "setting the stage for national reconciliation" in neighboring Angola and vowed closer U.S.-Zaire economic ties.

Bush agreed to encourage more U.S. investment in Zaire and lent his support to new loans it is seeking from the International Monetary Fund, the two leaders said after a two-hour White House session.

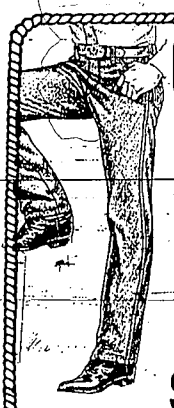

It was the president's first White House meeting with an African head-of-state.

Mobutu, speaking in French at the outdoor ceremony, said his meeting and lunch with Bush had been one of "warmth and friendship."

Panel OKs moratorium on oil exploration along U.S. coasts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation calling for a year-long moratorium on oil exploration along vast stretches off America's coast — including New England and Alaska — won approval Thursday from a key House committee where members repeatedly cited concern about possible oil spills.

The Bush administration immediately promised to fight the curbs, probably in the Senate, saying mandatory prohibitions on off-shore oil exploration would stifle badly needed domestic petroleum development.

"We believe they (congressionally-imposed bans) are a delaying tactic," said Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan.

The action by the House Appropriations Committee on a fiscal 1990 spending bill for the Interior Department would put a temporary halt to oil exploration in Alaska's Bristol Bay, one of the nation's premier fishing centers, where the government already has sold a half dozen exploratory leases.

The legislation also would extend or impose prohibitions on oil or gas exploration off California, off the Everglades of southwestern Florida, in the Georges Bank off New England, and along a 50-mile wide coastal strip that stretches from Rhode Island to Maryland.

"This is a critical victory at a critical time," said Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., chairman of the House Budget Committee. "The message is clear. We will not tolerate more tragic oil spills."

An exploratory drilling moratorium already has been in effect on leases in many of those areas, but the ban would be extended to the center coast of California and to the mid-Atlantic region under the legislation. It also would ensure that no exploratory activity is taken before October 1990, the end of the next fiscal year.

The $11.6 billion Interior money bill, which prohibits any money being spent on oil lease in the areas cited, cleared the House committee by a voice vote after two amendments aimed at softening the impact of the oil exploration moratorium were defeated by votes of 29-22 and 28-22.

The first amendment would have deleted reference to Bristol Bay, while the second would have allowed a variety of "pre-lease" activities off the California coast, although actual exploratory drilling would still have been put on hold.

Opponents of the Bristol Bay drilling ban argued that oil development in the pristine Alaska waters — home for a $1 billion fishing industry — is needed to keep America free of having to depend increasingly on oil imports.

"What we're doing in the name of the environment is cutting off our energy sources ... We're going to have brown-outs and then there will be black-outs," argued Rep. Bob Livingston, R-La.

Rep. Ralph Regula, R-Ohio, maintained that the danger from oil spills was not from off-shore drilling, but from tanker traffic, prompting Rep. Sidney Yates, D-Ill., to point out that tankers likely will transport the oil that would come from Bristol Bay.

Yates, chairman of the Interior subcommittee that had recommended the moratorium, cited the devastation left by the Exxon Valdez oil spill last March.

Alaska's congressional delegation and its governor have strongly urged for a temporary halt in oil exploration in Bristol Bay in light of the Exxon spill until greater assurances can be made that the environment will be protected.

The Interior Department sold exploratory leases for a half dozen sites in Bristol Bay last year.

FDA to ban propellant in aerosols

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration said Thursday it plans to ban the use of methylene chloride, a suspected carcinogen, in hair spray and other aerosol cosmetic products.

The ban is based on studies showing that when inhaled methylene chloride can cause lung and liver tumors in laboratory mice, said FDA spokesman William Grigg.

Rules for the ban were published in Thursday's Federal Register and were to take effect in 60 days.

Most hair spray manufacturers have stopped using methylene chloride as a fire retardant and drying agent since the FDA proposed the ban in December 1985. A recent FDA survey of Washington-area stores found only one brand containing the substance, Grigg said.

Methylene chloride also is used to remove caffeine from coffee, but the FDA said it had no immediate plans to ban this use because studies show the cancer risk comes from inhaling the substance rather than drinking it.

S&L bailout may require $2 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal bank regulators estimated Thursday they will spend $2 billion to rescue the 20 failed banks of the Dallas-based MCorp in the second costliest bank rescue in history.

L. William Seidman, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which backs commercial bank deposits, said he foresees no failures rivaling it in the immediate future.

Regulators picked Banc One Corp. of Columbus, Ohio, the nation's 25th largest banking company, from among six firms bidding to take over the insolvent banks with $13.1 billion in assets.

Banc One Chairman John B. McCoy assumes the chairmanship of the Texas institutions on July 5 and will operate them under the name of Bank One Texas.

The Ohio company, one of the most innovative retail banking operations in the country, is contributing $500 million in a complex arrangement that will permit it to exclude the Texas operation from its consolidated balance sheet and maintain its record as one of the nation's five most profitable banks.

The MCorp banks have been under federal control since March 28 when regulators stripped them from the parent holding company, leaving five banks and a trust operation still in private hands.

Seidman said $2 billion was the agency's "best estimate" of the bailout cost, but cautioned that could end up being $200 million to $300 million too high or too low. Most of the subsidy comes from covering losses on the failed banks' $3 billion to $3.6 billion in sour commercial real estate loans.

The FDIC will be part owner of Bank One Texas for five years.

SEC sues corporate raiders

NEW YORK (AP) — The Securities and Exchange Commission Thursday filed a lawsuit accusing corporate raider Paul A. Bilzerian and developer Edward J. DeBartolo Sr. of fraud in the takeover of Singer Co. and seeking $31.3 million in alleged illegal profits.

Bilzerian, DeBartolo and three others were charged in the lawsuit filed in federal court in Washington.

Without admitting any guilt, DeBartolo and two associates agreed to pay a total of more than $3 million to settle the charges, which included insider trading and helping Bilzerian conceal the source of funding in two transactions.

The allegations against Bilzerian are similar to the criminal charges on which Bilzerian was convicted earlier this month.

Bilzerian, 39, of Tampa, Fla., was found guilty by a federal jury in New York of nine counts of violating securities and tax laws during three takeover attempts and one other transaction. He faces up to five years in prison and $250,000 in fines on each count.

The SEC lawsuit details for the first time alleged illegal stock transactions in Bilzerian's $1.06 billion 1988 takeover of Singer.

Jaruzelski says party's monopoly on power 'is history'

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski says the Communist Party's automatic leading role in Poland "already is history" and it will never return to the monopoly rule of the past.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Jaruzelski also praised Solidarity leader Lech Walesa and said Poland would seek "friendly American support" but not "charity" during the July 9-11 visit of President Bush.

As to his own political plans, he said he would seriously consider the opposition's stance before deciding whether to accept the new office of president, to be decided by the National Assembly before Bush's visit. Solidarity legislators who are a minority in the assembly have said they'll vote against Jaruzelski if, as expected, he is nominated by the party.

"I am not striving for this office the way known and typical in the West. ... I will not crawl to this post," Jaruzelski said.

He said political and economic changes in Poland put it in the vanguard of East bloc reform but the opportunity for change could be lost if society rejects economic steps that are "painful — like every surgery that is expected to bring health."

Jaruzelski, party leader and president of the Council of State, discussed his eight years in power from the martial-law period to the historic reforms of recent months in an interview Wednesday in a reception room near his office in the Council of Ministers building. He also answered other questions in writing.

He said the communists did poorly in the June 4 and June 18 elections, losing 99 of the 100 seats in the freely contested Senate, because voters had not yet realized the extent to which the party has changed its program in favor of democracy and reforms.

"That is why I think that if the party will honestly ... implement its program, then it will have a chance to rebuild its influence in society," he said.

But he added the party's influence could never again be "on the basis of monopoly."

"We have become convinced that monopoly is a very unhealthy thing, not only in the economy, but also in political life," he said. On the party's automatic right to rule, Jaruzelski replied in writing: "The leading role of the party ... already is history."

Ethnic unrest widespread in Europe

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Ethnic tensions often spurred by years of hatred and mistrust are rising at a time when politicians longingly speak of a "common European home" linking East and West.

The causes of the strained relations are complex often involving land, religion, economics or political freedom and are sometimes part of a legacy of countries carved out after World War I.

Tens of thousands of ethnic Turks are fleeing Bulgaria. Baltic republics demand more freedom from Moscow and Italians resent the German-speaking minority in the mountainous north.

In the Soviet Union, some of the most bitterly contested ethnic unrest has hit Central Asia.

While the disputes stem from such different causes that comparisons are difficult, the overall picture is dramatic.

A flow of ethnic Turkish refugees has been heading south from Bulgaria into Turkey, and U.N. officials in Geneva say the number is likely to hit 100,000 by July 1.

"Everyone is packing his bags. A huge wave of immigration is in the offing and hundreds of thousands may come if the rules do not change," said Mustafa Ahmedov, a 25-year-old teacher who recently arrived in Turkey.

The exodus, sparked by Bulgaria's forced assimilation program for the approximately 1 million ethnic Turks, is bound to strain Turkey's economy and hobble parts of Bulgaria's farm and factory production.

Athens and Ankara, meanwhile, remain at odds over the 120,000 Moslems in western Thrace, bordering Turkey. Officials in Ankara insist on naming the minority "Turkish" and periodically express concern the rights of the minority are being trampled.

In the mountainous Alto Adige province of northern Italy, the neo-fascist Italian Social Movement has been picking up support from Italian speakers resentful of the German-speaking majority. The area also has been hit by bombings blamed on proponents of separatism.

In Yugoslavia, the most visible of several ethnic splits is the struggle between Serbs and ethnic Albanians in the southern province of Kosovo.

More than a half-million Serbs rallied in the provincial capital of Pristina on Wednesday to mark the 600th anniversary of the Battle of Kosovo, increasing tensions between the two sides. The 1389 battle sparked the Serbs' centuries-long fight against Islam. Serbia's drive to regain more control over its province led to rioting by Albanians in March that killed 25 people.

Li Peng defends actions

BEIJING (AP) — Premier Li Peng on Thursday dismissed international criticism that China's crackdown on the pro-democracy movement violated human rights, and he said the suppression was carried out legally.

The government also denounced the European Economic Community for condemning the crackdown on the student-led movement.

The steering committee of China's legislature, meanwhile, held a special meeting to endorse the Communist Party's suppression of dissent as "legal, correct and necessary."

Li said many nations had shown understanding for China's tough stance.

"At the same time, China has also noticed an anti-China adverse current. Under the banner of human rights, these people have made unwarranted accusations of China for its quelling of the counterrevolutionary rebellion and punishment of criminals according to law."

The official Xinhua News Agency said Li made the comments in a meeting with Foreign Minister Carlos Da Graca of Sao Tome and Principe, a tiny island nation off the west coast of Africa.

"Your visit is a support for China," Li told Da Graca, the highest-level foreign dignitary to visit China since soldiers marched on Beijing the night of June 3-4 and crushed the movement for a freer society.

The troops, backed by tanks, fired on unarmed civilians and drove thousands of protesters from Tiananmen Square. The government says 200 to 300 people, most of them soldiers, were killed in the confrontation. Chinese witnesses and Western intelligence reports say that most of the dead were civilians and that the toll was as high as 3,000.

Authorities since have arrested more than 1,800 people and executed 27, and China has become increasingly isolated from the international community.

The 12-nation EEC on Tuesday condemned the "brutal repression taking place in China" and called for an embargo on arms sales. It also urged the World Bank to postpone new loans to Beijing.

The United States, Canada, Japan and Australia have taken similar steps.

Wan Li, chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress, opened the committee meeting by praising the party and government for taking "resolute measures to quell the counterrevolutionary rebellion."

The full congress has about 3,000 members and meets once a year. It has limited powers and mainly serves as a forum for endorsing party policy.

The committee meeting was part of a nationwide campaign to unify China's 1.1 billion people behind the crackdown on the seven-week pro-democracy movement.

The committee canceled a June 20 session, at which it had planned to discuss political reforms demanded by students. The demands, including a freer press, were replaced on Thursday's agenda with a proposal to tighten control over people's rights to stage rallies and demonstrations.

"Stability represents China's highest interest," said Wan.

2-car accident sends several to hospital

TWIN FALLS – A two-car accident on Falls Avenue East injured five people Thursday.

According to police reports, a car driven by Mabel A. Lewis, 64, of Kimberly, disregarded a stop sign and drove into the intersection at Falls Avenue East and Eastland Drive.

A car driven by Francis Eugene Horejs, 66, of Twin Falls, struck Lewis' car. Lewis, Horejs and three passengers were taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center and Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital.

Lewis was listed in fair condition at MVRMC. The Horejses were listed in stable condition at the clinic and hospital. An investigation is continuing.

Meehl rules man now competent to stand trial

TWIN FALLS – A judge on Thursday decided a man charged with second-degree murder is mentally competent to stand trial after a year of treatment.

Fifth District Judge Daniel Meehl's order brings to an end more than a year of legal wrangling over Roy W. Haffner's mental capacity. Haffner's paranoid schizophrenia has been controlled with drugs, Meehl decided, and he is mentally competent to stand trial.

Haffner, 48, is charged with the November 1987 murder of Jesus Hernandez, 60.

Meridian woman dies in Interstate 84 rollover

TWIN FALLS – A 71-year-old Meridian woman died Thursday after the car she was driving rolled on Interstate 84.

Lucile Deppler of Meridian died at Magic Valley Regional Center. Her 1987 car, westbound on I-84 near the Hansen interchange, left the road and rolled about 2 p.m., state police said. Deppler was ejected from the car.

Melvin L. Burbank of Quart Site, Ariz., a passenger, was treated and released from the hospital.

Washburn student biking across country for MS

TWIN FALLS – They're not in Kansas anymore.

Three Washburn University students from Topeka, Kan., passed through Twin Falls Thursday trying to raise money for multiple sclerosis research.

Anson Flake is riding a bicycle across the country in an endeavor dubbed "Wheels are Turnin'," said Kyle Steadman, who, with Dudley Johnson, follow Flake in a 33-foot motor home donated for the effort.

The three started in Seattle on June 21, average about 125 to 150 miles per day and hope to reach Washington, D.C., by Aug. 9, stopping in 15 major cities along the way. So far they have raised $65,000 in cash and services. Money raised will stay with the local MS chapter where it was raised, Steadman said.

PUC OKs rate decrease for Intermountain Gas Co.

TWIN FALLS – Some Intermountain Gas Co. customers will see a decrease in their gas bills next month.

The Idaho Public Utilities Commission has approved a 5 percent or $3.4 million rate decrease for Intermountain Gas. Residential customers who use gas for space or water heating will see a 3.14 percent decrease, resulting in about $10 lower annual bills. Those who use gas for both will see a 0.03 percent decrease.

Commercial rates will drop 2 percent and large volume industrial rates will drop 6.8. The decreases reflect a drop in the company's transportation costs.

BLM now offering firewood, post, pole cutting permits

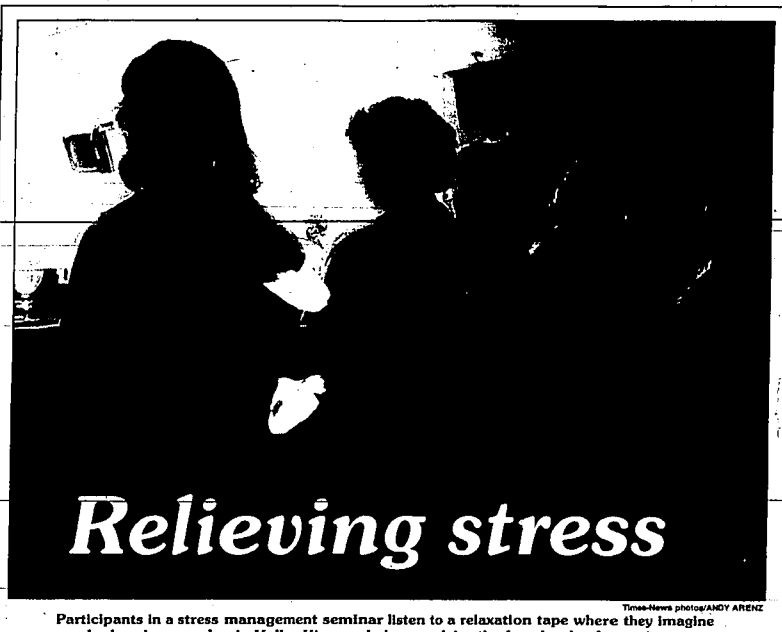

BURLEY – Firewood, post and pole cutting permits now are available from the Bureau of Land Management.

Permits for juniper cost $2.50 per cord with a four cord minimum. Permits for other types of wood including lodgepole, Douglas-fir and aspen cost $10 per cord with a two cord minimum.

Seminar teaches job-coping skills

TWIN FALLS – You can't avoid stress and you can't get rid of stress, says a hospital official. But you can learn to live with it.

Eighty percent of the people who go to the doctor complain of symptoms related to stress, said Jamie Kelley-Kinyon, the county hospital's social services director.

Kelley-Kinyon presented a luncheon workshop recently about occupational stress, job burnout and stress' physical side effects.

The session, part of a four-part series sponsored by Magic Valley Regional Medical Center called "Stress Management," also included advice on how to handle stress and extinguish burnout before it becomes a debilitating problem. The next series of classes begins Aug. 11.

A lot of times we think we're handling the stress created by our job, Kelley-Kinyon said, until we end up in the hospital after a heart attack or stroke.

"Many of us just don't realize the level of stress we're under," she said.

The three types of drugs prescribed most by physicians are hypertensives for high blood pressure, tranquilizers and ulcer medications, she said.

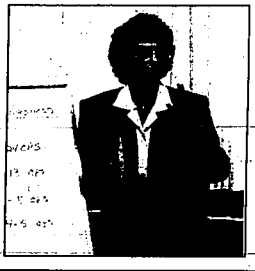

A World Health Organization experiment shows, however, that we're often unaware of significant bio-chemical changes our bodies may be undergoing, Kelley-Kinyon said.

In the experiment, military men worked 75-hour shifts, rotating every three hours between a desk job and practicing at the shooting range.

While the men generally said they were OK and felt they had performed the jobs well, physical tests showed significant chemical changes.

Stress is a fact of life, Kelley-Kinton

How stressful is your job?

TWIN FALLS – We all have a tendency to identify our job as the most stressful, says Jamie Kelley-Kinyon, the county hospital's social services director.

But a National Institute for Occupational Safety study tells the true story. Here's what researchers found:

Occupations with the highest incidence of stress:

1. laborer
2. secretary
3. inspector
4. clinical lab technician
5. office manager

8. waitress/waiter

Occupations with the lowest incidence of stress:

1. seamstresses
2. checker, examiners
3. stock handler
4. craftsman
5. maid
6. farm laborer
7. heavy equipment operator
8. freight handler

Kelley-Kinyon also had a list from The Baltimore Sun of the eight most boring jobs:

1. assembly line worker
2. elevator operator
3. pool typists
4. bank guard
5. copy machine operator
6. highway toll collector
7. file clerk

Plant mishap kills thousands of trout

By N. S. NOKKENTVED
Times-News writer

FILER – About $50,000 worth of trout were killed Tuesday when a worker at a Rangen Inc. fertilizer plant mistakenly diverted fertilizer into irrigation water.

While filling portable tanks from an 18,000 gallon liquid anhydrous ammonia tank, a worker at Rangen's plant at Peavey placed a hose used to bleed gas into an irrigation riser.

The escaping ammonia gas normally is bled into a holding tank full of water, and the water is later spread on fields as fertilizer.

Anhydrous ammonia is commonly used as fertilizer either directly or mixed with water.

The worker did not realize that the irrigation water, in which he had placed the bleed hose, flowed into a ditch feeding a fish pond, said Mark Stubbs, attorney for Rangen.

"We're not trying to deny anything," he said.

The water and fertilizer mixture flowed across a pasture into a drainage ditch that feeds fish rearing ponds owned by Rick Eggleston, who about two weeks ago lost about $60,000 worth of fish, possibly from a canal cleaning chemical.

When the ammonia reached the ponds the fish dived and leaped, trying to get away from the ammonia. Their action stirred up pond sediments.

Bacterial action from the sediments rapidly depleted oxygen in the water and the combination of ammonia and reduced oxygen killed the fish, Stubbs said.

The fish were not poisoned. Unfortunately, no one discovered that until it was too late to harvest the fish. They floated in the water more than 15 hours before tests determined they had not been poisoned, Stubbs said.

The pond contained an estimated 57,000 pounds of trout worth between 82 cent and 92 cents per pound.

Eggleston was unavailable for comment Thursday.

Rangen's insurance company is investigating the incident.

Jury sentences Marlow, Coffman to gas chamber

By MIKE GORDON
Special to The Times-News

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif., – A jury here on Thursday decided convicted killers James Gregory Marlow and Cynthia Coffman should die in the gas chamber for the brutal 1986 slaying of former Gooding resident Corinna Novis.

That same jury in March found the former lovers guilty of first degree murder, kidnapping and sodomy.

Marlow and Coffman could have received life in prison without parole. The verdict makes Coffman the first woman on California's death row, a population of 259 and growing. Superior Court Judge Don A. Turner will formally sentence the pair on July 27.

When it was read, Thursday's decision generated a wave of emotion in the courtroom, which was packed with a standing-room only crowd of almost 100 people, including 11 armed sheriff's deputies.

Coffman, 27, slumped face-forward on the table and began to sob, while Marlow, 33, kept the stoic expression he has maintained throughout this last phase of the trial.

Friends hugged smiling Bill and Donna Novis, Corinna's parents. The Novises have been away from their Gooding home, except for brief periods of time, since the trial began Oct. 31, 1988.

But it was the jurors whose emotional release was most vivid. Their faces were portraits of emotional struggle.

For some, the final colors on this canvas were painted with tears.

First assembled a year and three days ago as part of 670 potential jurors, they had given months of their life to finally reach this decision.

Their final deliberations for the penalty phase of the trial began June 21.

A man and woman juror held hands as the clerk read the decision and another juror burst into tears. Jury foreman James Rich battled to keep his in check.

"Lack of remorse was what swayed me," Rich said later. "I didn't think it was evident. That was the hardest thing I've ever done. You questioned your own values and if your were doing the right thing or making a mistake. I think all of us did that."

Rich said it was a fair trial and he is glad it is over.

"I just want this behind me," he said. "I don't want to deal with it anymore. I'm going to take a couple of days off and apologize to my wife for being so cranky."

The months of testimony had forged a bond among the jurors, one that may never be broken.

"There were lots of different personalities," Rich said. "We argued at time, we fought at times and we reasoned at times. And I think there were some friendships made."

But the people the jury could never speak

Judge will decide bean ownership

The Times-News

BOISE – A federal judge may decide today who owns the beans stored in the Hawkins Co. Ltd. warehouse.

A hearing is scheduled for 10 a.m. before Judge Alfred Hagan in the U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Boise.

"This is the first decision on the ownership and disposition of the beans," said Lloyd Walker, a Twin Falls attorney representing growers.

The Filer bean warehouse's license was suspended by the state in November after a year-end audit revealed inventory shortages. The company's directors filed for bankruptcy Jan. 6.

Approximately 150 area farmers, several banks and other bean dealers are embroiled in the legal tangle.

Walker has asked the judge to order Hawkins to release beans to the 17 growers he represents. If Hagan grants the request, the beans will be returned to the growers immediately, Walker said.

Attorneys representing other growers involved in the dispute have also asked the judge to declare today who are the rightful to were Bill and Donna Novis, whose front-row seats they passed each time they entered the courtroom.

On Thursday the jurors got to stop and meet the Novises. They shook hands, not quite strangers, not quite friends.

"It's terrible to see people every day and not know them," Donna Novis said in shaking a jurors hand.

"I'm so sorry any of this had to happen," juror Carey told Donna Novis as they embraced.

Novis turned to Rich, a mother still grieving.

"Did you see pictures of my daughter?" she asked him. "She was an angel. I swear, she was an angel. Thank you again."

Her daughter was 20 years old when she disappeared on Nov. 7, 1986 outside a Redlands mall. A week later Corinna Novis' sodomized and strangled body was found buried in a Fontana vineyard. Novis was working in an insurance office in Redlands at the time.

Marlow and Coffman had blamed each other for the killing. They testified that they had only planned to kidnap and rob someone. The pair said they singled out Novis because they thought the new car she drove meant she had a lot of money.

They wanted to steal enough cash to get to Phoenix, Ariz., where they believed they could get a large sum of money by killing an unidentified pregnant woman.

The penalty phase of the trial, which began in April, focused on the tragic loves of Marlow and Coffman.

Marlow's attorneys argued that society's safety nets had failed to catch him and that his mother – a prostitute who started her son's addiction to heroin – had emotionally scarred him for life.

Coffman's attorneys tried to convince the jury that she was remorseful and that her rebellious teenage years had not made her a murderess.

Marlow and Coffman have also been charged with the murder of Lynell Morray, a 19-year-old Huntington Beach resident who disappeared two days before Corinna Novis was abducted. That trial, which also could result in the death penalty, is set to begin soon in Orange County.

owners of the beans, Walker said.

During a pre-trial hearing May 31, Hawkins' lawyer James Tucker said the beleaguered company does not claim to own the beans stored in its warehouses. But, he said, Hawkins' creditors may nevertheless have a legal claim to the beans.

The judge has put aside July 17-18 for further hearings on the matter, but a court clerk said nothing is scheduled yet. The next scheduled hearing on Hawkins will be Aug. 10 in Boise. The court said earlier this month that it would move its hearings involving the Hawkins case to Twin Falls because so many Magic Valley residents are involved. So far no local hearings local hearings have been set.

That's not a big issue, Walker said. "The farmers care about their beans, not the drive."

Stress

said after the session, but it can be reduced by balancing work with other aspects of one's life, such as family and exercise.

"For a lot of people, work becomes a priority," she said.

Stress can also be reduced by communicating with the boss to iron out differences and realize each other's expectations.

If stress isn't managed, burnout can set in.

"The process of burnout can take a long time," Kelley-Kinyon said. "It's an insidious thing that creeps up on you."

The first sign of burnout often is an "overwhelming enthusiasm and desire to succeed."

Having positive feelings isn't bad, Kelley-Kinyon said, but when we start in a job or on a project with an I'm-going-to-conquer-the-world attitude, we're setting ourselves up for burnout.

If events don't flow as expected, a cynical attitude or the "blahs" set in, followed by the physical symptoms.

Sleep disturbances are common at this stage, and apathy occurs on the job. Efficiency diminishes and the desire to escape, through drugs, alcohol, food or just daydreaming, becomes more tempting.

Soon a bad day becomes a bad week, a bad month and then a bad year. One becomes excessively defensive, more apathetic and withdraws. Meanwhile, the body is continuing to deteriorate physically and psychologically.

Symptoms intensify, workers take more time off for sickness and efficiency continues to decrease.

In the final stages, separating work problems from physical and psychological ones becomes difficult, energy is depleted, one feels trapped and then the heart attack or stroke hits.

To prevent job burnout, Kelley-Kinyon said, understand the nature of it, be aware of the signals your body may be sending you, such as the sleep disturbances or changes in eating patterns, and have realistic goals.

Kelley-Kinyon said one should occasionally reconsider and re-evaluate priorities and reduce long work hours whenever possible.

She also talked about physical, but not competitive, exercise and using relaxation techniques such as deep breathing to take a break from stressful situations.

Session participants interviewed afterward said Kelley-Kinyon's talk had hit home.

"The things she has talked about make sense," said Betty Wooten, Community Action Agency director.

"It made me realize I wasn't just imagining it and that it wasn't just me. It's just nice to know others are feeling the same."

School board candidate challenges results

CHALLIS (AP) – Challis School Board candidate Peggy Harmer has filed a petition in 7th District Court challenging the results of the school district's May 16 trustee election.

Harmer was one of three candidates for trustee in the district's Zone 2. Incumbent Hazel Crane received 36 votes, Harmer 35 and Judith McQuiston 34.

When the Challis School Board canvassed the election results June 6, one ballot was disqualified because it was cast by a patron who did not live in Zone 2. Not knowing who the vote was for, the board, on the advice of its attorney, subtracted one vote from each candidate's total.

The board accepted the amended results as final, but postponed seating Crane in case the election was contested.

The three candidates met after the June 6 board meeting and agreed the election should be challenged, Harmer said. She filed the petition on her own Monday, the deadline for challenges.

Harmer contends the board's action was illegal because it amounted to invalidating two valid votes.

"My feelings are, I would be perfectly happy if either candidate had won, but it's just that, if it's wrong it's wrong," she said. "I'm doing this more as a patron of the district than as a candidate."

Local firms get road contracts

By HELEN HARSHBARGER
Times-News correspondent

JEROME – Two local firms were awarded contracts for road projects in the Magic Valley.

Lone Pine Equipment Co. Inc. of Kimberly submitted the low bid of $335,521 for seal coating on Idaho Highway 24, Idaho Highway 25 and Interstate 84 in Jerome, Minidoka, Lincoln and Cassia counties.

Twin Falls Construction Co. Inc. of Twin Falls submitted the low bid of $459,843 for seal coating on I-84 in Gooding and Jerome counties and producing cover coat material in stockpiles in Lincoln County.

Lone Pine will begin work in mid-July and should be finished by late August. Motorists can expect up to 15 minute delays during this period. Twin Falls Construction will start work in early August and is scheduled to be completed in late fall. Motorists can expect minor traffic interference.

Lone Pine will seal coat about 18 miles of Highway 24 from Minidoka to Kimama, 6.3 miles of Highway 24 near Kimama West, 3.7 miles of Highway 25 from Jerome to junction U.S. 93 and about 10 miles of the westbound lanes on I-84 from Cotterell to south Idahome.

The project by Twin Falls Construction will seal coat about eight miles of I-84 from the south Wendell interchange to the west Jerome interchange, including the ramps at the south Wendell interchange.

Seal coating involves applying a thin layer of asphalt oil to the road surface and then covering it with crushed rock chips. This prevents water from seeping into the pavement and causing cracks when it freezes. It also helps roads' resistance to skidding.

Twin Falls Construction will also produce 20,000 tons of cover coat material in stockpiles on the Shoshone, Richfield and Dietrich areas for future seal coating on Highway 24, Highway 75 and U.S. 93.

Williams says changes needed in formulas for farm payment

BOISE (AP) — State Auditor J.D. Williams says some changes might have to be made in the formula used to determine payments to farmers and ranchers for damage done by marauding big game last winter.

But after meeting Thursday with the chairman of the Idaho Wildlife Council, Williams said the biggest thing causing concern among the state's sportsmen is misunderstanding of the method for determining claims.

"I'm satisfied from the conversation we had that we've answered their questions," he said.

As a result, Williams said, "I would be very surprised if there are any major fish and game organizations that would be initiating any lawsuits. I would not be surprised if we get some lawsuits from farmers."

His meeting with Wildlife Council Chairman Don Clower of Meridian was arranged by Idaho Fish and Game Commissioner Richard Meiers of Eagle after Clower said his group was considering legal action against the state Board of Examiners over the depredation payment process.

The Board of Examiners is comprised of Gov. Cecil Andrus, Attorney General Jim Jones and Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa.

Some sportsmen were upset over what they saw as a political move to increase reimbursements to landowners for damage done by deer, elk and antelope.

"There were some parts of the formula that I personally didn't agree with and I don't believe the council would agree with," Clower said after his meeting with Williams. "But all in all I have a much better feeling for Mr. Williams and his technique now."

The 1989 Legislature appropriated $500,000 from Fish and Game license and tag money to repay farmers and ranchers who lost crops and hay to hungry big game. But by the June 1 filing deadline, the state had received nearly 200 claims totaling $1.7 million in alleged damages, including $1.2 million for damage suffered during the last six months of 1988.

After investigating a number of claims, the Idaho Department of Fish and Game recommended paying only about 11 percent of the total claim value. But the Board of Examiners earlier this month approved payments of $57,661 for five of the largest claims, which totaled almost $300,000.

Williams said the amount paid to those "hardship" cases represented 42 percent of the claims determined to be valid after a reassessment of the landowners' losses. The payments were recommended by a subcommittee headed by the auditor.

The 42-percent payment level was not intended to apply to all other claims, but many Idaho sportsmen got the impression it was. Williams said the actual reimbursement level will vary from case to case, from no payment to 100 percent of the submitted claim.

But Clower raised some other legitimate points during Thursday's meeting, he said, including concern over the recommended reimbursement level for damage to dryland pasture.

A statewide average lease rate calculated at $6.99 per animal unit month "may be a little high" because of the condition of pastureland after two years of drought, Williams said. He planned to raise the issue with agricultural extension specialists at the University of Idaho.

Williams also acknowledged that it might not be sufficiently accurate to subtract 10 percent from all estimated crop yields submitted in claims to account for drought damage not related to depredation. Some landowners contend the level is too high, but many sportsmen believe it is too low, he said.

Instead of a 10-percent cut for drought damage across the board, Williams said, his subcommittee probably would recommend tailoring allowances for non-depredation drought damage to the type of crop involved in each claim.

Clower said he would talk to the leaders of the Wildlife Council's six regional councils about the results of the Thursday meeting and gauge their feelings about the need for additional action. Williams also has agreed to attend the Region 3 meeting July 17 in Boise to explain the payment process to members, he said.

"I think anytime you have an attempt at compromise you reduce the chances for legal action," he said. "The Wildlife Council doesn't really care to engage in legal action with the Board of Examiners, as long as we're satisfied our money is being spent properly."

To ensure that, Clower said, council members still believed the state should pursue charges against any damage claims determined to be fraudulent.

Auditor asks for provable claims for depredation

BOISE (AP) — The state auditor's office is processing $1.7 million in damage claims submitted by Idaho landowners for damage caused by livestock last winter.

Auditor J.D. Williams has decided to process the claims and base the damage on provable loss of yield, as shown through farmers' records.

As part of that process, his staff asked the nearly 200 landowners who submitted claims to send in more information, detailing average yield to determine the loss to big game.

The deadline for returning the information forms is July 7. The Board of Examiners, which approves spending the $500,000 appropriated by the Legislature to pay the claims, meets July 11, but Williams said it appears not all the claims will be processed by that time.

And not all farmers are happy about having to spend more time filling out forms for the state.

Ralph Yates of Pollock responded to Williams' request for more information by saying he felt "you are going about this in a typical, dumb government way."

Yates said it was simple enough: He had a certain number of wild animals on his property for a certain number of days and they ate a certain amount of his feed and crops.

The best solution, he wrote Williams, would be for the state to remove the wild animals from his land. Barring that, he said, "pay up and quit trying to weasel out of it."

Yates' claim for 1989 damage was $3,150.

In a claim submitted by Walter C. Koepp, on behalf of Koepp Inc. of Kendrick, the landowner asked $5,400. Koepp's response to Williams' latest request noted that the federal Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service stopped calculating average county wheat yields six years ago.

"We have sent you enough information to process this claim, we feel," Koepp wrote.

"We have asked the Fish and Game Department to correct this situation for many years with no response. This is my final response to you. We are forced to correct this problem of the wild game ourselves," Koepp said.

Lee Cole of Council was more blunt. He asked $600 for wildlife damages.

"The Legislature appropriated this money for game damages," he wrote. "As with all government projects, you can't get it to the people who need it. I don't intend to fill out claims for the next two years," he said.

Authorities suspect List is D.B. Cooper

SEATTLE (AP) — The FBI is investigating a man arrested in an 18-year-old New Jersey murder case as a possible suspect in the 1971 hijacking of a Boeing 727 by a man known as D.B. Cooper.

"John List is one of any number of people suspected in the D.B. Cooper case," said FBI spokesman John Eyer.

"He will be investigated until he is eliminated," Eyer said Thursday, adding he did not consider it a breakthrough in the case, the only unsolved skyjacking in U.S. history.

Eyer said List had been considered a suspect since 1971 when he disappeared after his wife, three children and mother were shot to death in the family home in Westfield, N.J.

The case was recently featured on the television show "America's Most Wanted" and as a result a man identified as List was arrested in Richmond, Va., on June 1.

The killings, known as the "ballroom murders" because of where bodies were found in the house, occurred about Nov. 9, 1971, although they weren't found until December 7.

It was on Thanksgiving, Nov. 24, 1971, that a passenger who signed on as Dan B. Cooper hijacked Northwest Flight 305 from Portland by handing a stewardess a note saying he had a bomb. On the ground in Seattle, Cooper demanded four parachutes and $200,000 in $20 bills in exchange for the release of the passengers and some crew members.

The plane took off for Mexico, but somewhere in the vicinity of Mount St. Helens he leaped from the plane with the money.

The only trace ever found was $5,800 of the ransom money, which was found washed ashore on a sand bar on the Columbia River in February 1980.

Despite the routine FBI interest, others doubt a List-D.B. Cooper connection.

"I have heard that...," said David P. Baugh, the lawyer who represented List in Richmond, Va. "But I also heard that Elvis is living in Detroit now. I put those two together."

The man who packed the parachute used by Cooper and who has followed the case ever since, Earl Cossey of Woodinville, doubts whether the hijacker survived the jump.

"I think D.B. Cooper is dust," Cossey said Wednesday.

Court upholds one appeal, rejects another

BOISE (AP) — A Power County man won one appeal before the Court of Appeals on Thursday, but lost another.

The court unanimously upheld his conviction and subsequent prison term of up to 16 years for lewd and lascivious conduct, a charge involving his 11-year-old stepdaughter. But the same court reversed a district court ruling rejecting his petition for post-conviction relief. New hearings were ordered.

Lyle Edison Whitehawk was sentenced at the end of 1986 after a psychological evaluation concluded he had a sexual preference for children and was a danger to society.

That sentence was upheld by the Court of Appeals. The court noted that District Judge Peter McDermott specifically warned Whitehawk that if the evaluation showed the man to be a danger to society, the judge was not bound by a plea-bargain agreement recommending withheld judgment.

Boise vendor charged with extortion of burglary victim

NAMPA (AP) — A Boise coin dealer with three shops in the Treasure Valley has been charged with extortion of a Nampa burglary victim, police say.

In a joint investigation, the Ada County Sheriff's office arrested James Beem, 53, on Monday, while the Canyon County Sheriff's Department is continuing its review of a June 18 burglary of a Nampa home where more than $20,000 in jewelry, rare coins and currency were taken.

Ada County Detective Lt. Dan Douthit said the burglary victim had to pay money to recover some of the stolen property. After the transaction, Beem was arrested and charged with extortion.

He owns and operates Idaho Stamp and Coin, Nampa Coin and Pawn and Meridian Coin and Pawn. He was arraigned Tuesday in Ada County on the felony charge and released without bond, Douthit said.

Canyon Capt. Dave Rowe said it is unknown who burglarized the home. The theft was discovered when the occupants returned from a camping trip.

He said the bulk of the stolen property was recovered, with the exception of cash and a large single diamond worth about $10,000.

Idaho industrial sites may get EPA cleanup

POCATELLO (AP) — Three southeastern Idaho industrial sites likely will be added to the federal Environmental Protection Agency's Superfund waste cleanup list, an agency official says.

David Bennett, EPA Superfund coordinator in Seattle, said 90 to 95 percent of the sites proposed for cleanup receive Superfund designations, so there is a good chance the local sites will be added to the list.

"Based on our accuracy rate, I'd say there is a high probability," he said. However, "These sites do not jump to the top in terms of reviewing the comments raised."

In May, 3,200 acres around the FMC Corp. and J.R. Simplot Co. elemental phosphorus plants west of Pocatello, as well as the Monsanto Chemical Co. and Kerr-McGee Chemical Corp. operations near Soda Springs, were proposed for inclusion on the Superfund list.

The EPA cited concern over groundwater contamination. Traces of arsenic, cadmium and selenium have been found in the groundwater beneath FMC and Simplot, and cadmium was among heavy metals detected in wells at Monsanto.

U.S. World Cup match moves to neutral site

By The Washington Post

The site of the U.S. national team's World Cup qualifying soccer match on July 9 has been moved from El Salvador to a neutral site, soccer's world governing body announced Thursday.

FIFA's decision came four days after fan misbehavior forced the referee to stop a match between El Salvador and Costa Rica at San Salvador's 50,000-seat Flor Blanca Stadium. Costa Rica had a 4-2 lead in the 84th minute when Salvadoran fans threw bottles, cans and fruit onto the field to protest their team's play in its first qualifying match.

El Salvador is banned from playing a qualifying game at home until July 25, when FIFA meets in Zurich to determine if the ban will be continued for the country's two other home matches on Aug. 13 and Nov. 26. A new site for the U.S. game probably will be announced Friday, and a FIFA spokesman in Zurich told the Associated Press that Mexico is a possibility.

East German athletes get drugs, shocks, says skier

By The Washington Post

East German athletes are given dangerous electric shocks to inflate their muscles, Hans-Georg Aschenbach, a former East German Olympic ski jumping champion, was quoted as saying. Another defector also claims in the West German newspaper Bild that East German soccer players take stimulants before matches.

The disclosures came in the fourth part of a series in Bild on the alleged systematic use of performance-enhancing drugs by East Germany's sports authorities to train athletes for international competition.

Two-time Olympic gold medalist skater Katarina Witt displays form in Sun Valley practice session

...first and foremost a skater

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

SUN VALLEY — For five years, she dominated women's figure skating like nobody since Sonya Henie in the 1930s. A year removed from her epic Olympic showdown with Debi Thomas, there remains a lot of Carmen in Katarina Witt.

"It's different now than it was when I was skating (as an amateur), but I still want to skate the best I can," said Witt Thursday prior to a practice session for her three-performance Sun Valley ice show that begins Saturday night. "I still skate every day, but I skate to give a good performance now, not to win a gold medal."

Witt, a 23-year-old East German, is a two-time Olympic gold medalist and a four-time world champion whose long program accompanied by Georges Bizet's opera at the Calgary Games a year ago set a new standard for women's figure skating. She's an international celebrity now, acting and touring with a big-name ice show, but she's still first and foremost a skater.

"I still skate every day because I love it," she said. "If I don't, I give it up. Sometimes I say I don't feel like skating today, but when I get before a crowd of people, it changes. I want to skate for them."

The pressure's off now for Witt

Witt will skate Saturday, Sunday and Tuesday at the Sun Valley Ice Center in a show that will also include 1988 Olympic men's gold medalist Brian Boitano, former world champion Linda Fratianne and David and Jimmy Santee. She'll be back on Aug. 11-12 to skate with 1984 Olympic gold medalist Scott Hamilton. (Ticket information is available by calling the Sun Valley Sports Center at 622-4111).

Witt's career since Calgary has been unprecedented for an East Bloc athlete. She's toured the world as a professional, skating for the most part with Americans and Canadians, whom she counts as her friends.

"Brian Boitano came to my country and skated (in an ice show)," she said. "One of things I enjoy about my skating is that I am skating with people I like, like Brian Orser and Brian Boitano."

The competition is friendlier now, but there are times when she misses the showdowns of her amateur days when Olympic medals and world championship hung on hundredths of points.

"Sometimes it's nice to go into competition so we can prove ourselves. That's

Walker likes pitching job by recruit Poulton

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

RUPERT — It was good and good news for Twin Falls American Legion (aka College of Southern Idaho) coach Jim Walker and his Cowboys Thursday evening.

The Cowboys jumped on Mini-Cassia ace Dan Poulton for six runs in the first two innings for an insurmountable lead that eventually led to a 7-5 Southern Region "A" victory.

That was the first good news for Walker, who saw his team jump on the positive side of .500 for the first time at 12-11 overall, 2-3 in league games. The other good news is that Poulton, who has signed an athletic aid letter for basketball and baseball at CSI, was in total control over the final seven innings.

"It's a good win for us. It puts me one up on (Minico coach) Lynn (VanEvery)," Walker smiled concerning his three-game rivalry with the former infielder of his national junior college championship team.

"I was pleased the way our batters went after the ball in the first couple of innings," Walker said. "But I was really impressed with the way Danny withstood it and came back to actually dominate us over the last several innings. He just refused to knuckle under to the early pressure and ended up pitching a heckuva game. He proved he's a real competitor who knows how to keep his head."

The early blitz started right away when Cowboy leadoff hitter Torry Bollinger turned a wrongfield bloop into a double and

Freter wins Ore-Ida race to Ketchum

KETCHUM — Katina Freter of Kinetic Systems won the U.S. West Long Distance Race Thursday, the grueling 62-mile bicycle race from Stanley to Ketchum that marks the halfway point of the Ore-Ida Women's Challenge.

Freter, of Wheeling, W. Va., beat out Stage 1 winner Peggy Maass, Stage 3 winner Linda Brenneman and hometown favorite Ruthie Matthes.

Freter found herself on the winner's podium for the first time in the 11-stage event that will continue today with two different races in Sun Valley.

Freter started the day in 19th position and early in the race up 8,700-foot Galena Summit on Idaho Highway 75, she found herself trailing the lead pack.

"After six days of racing, I'm tired," said the 22-year-old. "Going up Galena, there were two packs and I was 50 yards off the back pack. On the descent, when I caught the main girls, I was surprised.

"I figured it was a real long downhill," she continued. "I wanted to finish in the top 20. I made a jump and nobody went with me. I looked over my shoulder and they were right on me. There was a girl from Lowrey's (Matthes) and a girl from Weight

Judge received contributions from Rose lawyers

The Associated Press

CINCINNATI — A judge who ruled in favor of Pete Rose in his lawsuit against baseball has accepted more than $1,600 in past campaign contributions from lawyers in two firms that represent Rose, Hamilton County records show.

Judge Norbert A. Nadel, of Hamilton County Common Pleas Court, declined comment Thursday.

"He's not making any comment at this time," said Nadel's court constable, Kathy O'Mara. She said she did not know whether Nadel will have a comment later.

Rose lawyers Reuven J. Katz and Robert A. Pitcairn Jr., who have contributed to Nadel's campaigns and are representing Rose before the judge, declined to return telephone calls to their Cincinnati office for comment.

The Philadelphia Inquirer reported Thursday that during his 1982 and 1984 races for Hamilton County Common Pleas Court, Nadel accepted 26 separate contributions from lawyers in the two firms. The newspaper said the information came from Hamilton County Board of Elections records.

Lawyers in the Cincinnati law firm of Dinsmore & Schohl, representing major league baseball in the case, made two contributions, totaling $150, to Nadel during the election campaigns, according to the records.

The contributions from the two firms representing Rose individually ranged up to $200. In his two races, according to campaign reports, Nadel received 690 contributions totaling almost $63,500.

Two of the contributors in the firm representing Rose said their support was minor and had nothing to do with Nadel's ruling Sunday, he granted a 14-day temporary restraining order which delays for two weeks baseball Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti's effort to conduct a hearing on whether Rose gambled on baseball games.

Nadel is to conduct a hearing July 6 on whether to extend his order, based on his finding that Giamatti prejudged Rose and

Professor rates ballplayers; says Ozzie Smith is overpaid

The Associated Press

DAYTON, Ohio — Cincinnati Reds outfielder Eric Davis is underpaid, St. Louis Cardinals shortstop Ozzie Smith may be overpaid, and a home run can add more than $4,000 to a player's paycheck, according to an economics professor who has aimed a computer at baseball salaries.

Lawrence Hadley says his analysis shows that the best-paid players on average are the balanced hitters that can combine power with a strong batting average and pitchers who win 20 or more games a year.

Hadley, chairman of the University of Dayton's economics department, says it took him about three months to collect data and put together the statistical computer program that allowed him to analyze why major league players get paid what they do. Collaborating on the project was Elizabeth Gustafson, an econometrician at the university.

"I'm a labor economist; also, I'm a baseball fan, a serious baseball fan," Hadley said. "It was a way of combining my hobby with serious professional work."

Browns' Mack faces drug trafficking charges

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Kevin Mack, a running back with the Cleveland Browns, was charged Thursday with aggravated drug trafficking after authorities found what they believed was cocaine in his car, a Cleveland Municipal Court clerk said.

Mack, 26, the Browns' second-leading rusher last year, was freed this morning on $2,500 bond and is to appear for a preliminary hearing Friday at 9 a.m. before Judge Mabel Jasper, said deputy clerk Kevin Mullen.

Police Commander Robert Bolton said Mack was arrested Wednesday evening without incident on suspicion of possession of cocaine after 11 packets of the substance, valued at $50 each, were found in his car.

The charges were filed following a chemical analysis of the packets.

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Scott Bankhead held Texas to three singles in eight innings and Darnell Coles went 3-for-4 with an RBI as the Seattle Mariners beat the Texas Rangers 2-0 Thursday night.

Bankhead, 6-4, won his fourth straight decision and is unbeaten in his last eight starts. He didn't walk a batter and struck out four before giving way to Mike Schooler, who allowed one hit in the ninth for his 16th save.

Bankhead did not permit a runner beyond first base. He has allowed three earned runs or less in 14 of his 16 starts.

Still on a roll, King leads du Maurier

MONTREAL (AP) — Betsy King kept on the roll that has made her the top player on the women's tour with a sharp, 5-under-par 67 to take the first-round lead Thursday at the $600,000 LPGA du Maurier Classic, the richest event on the tour.

King, 33, the LPGA tour's leading money winner this season with $365,986, overcame bumpy greens on the back nine to open the third of the tour's four major tournaments.

Geiberger has advantage in Seniors

LIGONIER, Pa. (AP) — Al Geiberger put a birdie-birdie finish on a 68 that wrested the lead from an obscure amateur Thursday in the first round of the U.S. Seniors Open Golf Championship.

Geiberger's 4-under-par effort lifted him one stroke ahead of Frank Boydston, a restaurant owner from Phoenix who compiled a 69 despite a double-bogey 7 on the final hole.

Beck takes 1-stroke lead in Western

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Chip Beck, seeking a special present while delaying his honeymoon, shot a 7-under-par 65 Thursday for a 1-stroke lead in the $1 million Western Open Golf Tournament.

Beck, who was married last Saturday to Karen Thompson, had a 34-31—65 over the 7,097-yard Butler National course with its par of 36-36—72 to take the lead over Payne Stewart and Blaine McCallister.

Utah Jazz name general manager

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Utah Jazz Thursday hired Salt Lake City businessman Tim Howells as the third general manager of the NBA team since it moved to Utah 10 years ago.

Jazz owner Larry H. Miller told reporters at a news conference that Howells would be concerned primarily with the business end of the team, but he would have final say on all decisions.

Dotson, White Sox agree to terms

CHICAGO (AP) — Veteran right-hander Richard Dotson, released by New York last week, agreed to terms Thursday with the Chicago White Sox, the team that dealt him to the Yankees after the 1987 season.

The White Sox immediately scheduled the 30-year-old Dotson to pitch against Kansas City on Saturday night and take a disgruntled Bill Long's place in the rotation. Long was told by Manager Jeff Torborg that he will miss a turn or two and promptly blasted team management.

NFL to vote on successor to Rozelle

By Newsday

The National Football League called a special meeting Thursday of all 28 owners for next Thursday in Chicago to vote on a successor for outgoing commissioner Pete Rozelle.

Although the six-owner search committee previously intended to recommend two candidates for the job, New York Giants owner Wellington Mara said it now appears one candidate will receive the committee's unanimous endorsement.

Abdul-Jabbar won't play in Italy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar is too busy with endorsement and entertainment commitments to consider playing professional basketball in Italy, his lawyer said Tuesday.

Leonard Armato denied newspaper reports from Italy saying he was scheduled to meet in New York with Italian club officials who were interested in negotiating a contract with the former Los Angeles Lakers' center.

Memphis State coach still confident

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Memphis State's new head football coach says he's confident the Tiger program will survive an ongoing investigation by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

"We're going to get through that thing without any problem at all," Chuck Stobart said Monday after accepting the Memphis State job.

Top Wimbledon players tumble

The Washington Post

LONDON — To be a player of note was to imperiled on this strange, enervating afternoon at Wimbledon, as third-seeded Gabriela Sabatini and fifth-seeded Zina Garrison were upset, and Martina Navratilova, Chris Evert, Pam Shriver and John McEnroe all were threatened in only the second round.

It was almost too much to cope with Thursday, the turns and twists in matches across the green expanse of the All-England Club. Garrison, a U.S. Open semifinalist last year, rallied from a 0-5 deficit and saved five match points only to succumb to Australian Louise Field, ranked just No. 121, 1-6, 6-2, 7-5. Sabatini, ranked No. 3 and only three years ago a semifinalist here, was defeated, 6-4, 6-3, by No. 36 Rosalyn Fairbank of South Africa.

"I lost the match and didn't even realize what happened," Sabatini said. "It went so fast."

That was a sentiment echoed across the lawns, as numerous favorites found themselves at unforeseen deficits. Twenty seeded players began second-round play with what should have been routine matches. What was most surprising at the end of the day was that with all of the threatened upsets, only four came to pass. The other two seeded players who lost were No. 15 Mikael Pernfors, and No. 16 Susan Sloane.

NBA bans Washburn for drugs

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Washburn of the Atlanta Hawks became the fifth player banned from the NBA for life under the league's anti-drug agreement, the league said Thursday.

The league gave no other details of the latest incident involving Washburn except to call it his "third violation."

Washburn was suspended without pay for the 1988-89 season by the NBA on Sept. 26, 1988, after a substance-abuse relapse and returned to the league's rehabilitation center in Van Nuys, Calif.

Gary Bettman, counsel for the NBA, said at the time that Washburn had received a "second strike" under the league's substance-abuse program, but he would not reveal any details.

Washburn may appeal the lifetime ban after two years.

John Drew, who played for the Hawks and Utah Jazz, was the first player banned for life under the anti-drug agreement in January 1986.

The next month Micheal Ray Richardson of the New Jersey Nets was banned and in January 1987 Lewis Lloyd and Mitchell Wiggins of the Houston Rockets were banned.

NEGLECTED COOLANT

Most car owners pay little attention to their cars' cooling systems as long as they are not leaking. Yet, loss of coolant is not the only cause of overheating. It is also possible that rust and scale will develop over time within a neglected cooling system. These two unwanted coolant ingredients are byproducts of chemical reactions between metals in the system and minute amounts of air and exhaust gases. Rust and scale can cause an overheated engine by decreasing the flow of coolant. They also form an insulating barrier on interior surfaces that inhibit the coolants ability to throw off heat. In order to avoid these problems, it is a good idea to have the car's coolant system properly flushed according to a regular maintenance schedule. This approach is far preferable to rebuilding a corroded system.

Magic Valley Elks boxers achieve success

JOHNNY VALDEZ
11-year veteran

By BOB HOWARD
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley is not known for its production of boxers. But according to a man who should know, there are quite a few up-and-coming fighters here.

Woody Turley, coach of the Magic Valley Elks Boxing Team, said that from October to May close to 20 fighters come together every night at 7 to train for their weekend bouts.

The Kids' Game

These boxers have to be in the best shape of their lives to compete in this sport.

"It's the toughest nine minutes in sports," said Turley, a former boxer.

Boxers tend not to stay in the sport unless they love it, Turley said, adding that fighters are the best-conditioned athletes in the country. As in many sports, training is the hardest part of boxing, but when the training is finished the fighter still has to last three rounds.

"Boxing is the safest contact sport in the world," said Turley.

Turley said every precaution is taken to ensure the safety of the boxers. If there is any sign that a fighter is in trouble, the bout is stopped immediately. Protective headgear and gloves are worn, but other than that the fighter is on his own.

The Twin Falls Elks Club has put together a complete set of facilities, and during the season two or three cards are held in the Elks' gym to raise money for the club's traveling and expenses.

"The Elks boxing club has about 20 fighters from all over the Magic Valley. Last year they won 74 percent of their fights; this year, 72 percent.

Among those fighters is Kris Estrada, 18, who is a two-time Idaho Amateur Boxing Federation and Golden Gloves welterweight champion. Estrada is 10-0 this year and has been fighting for two years.

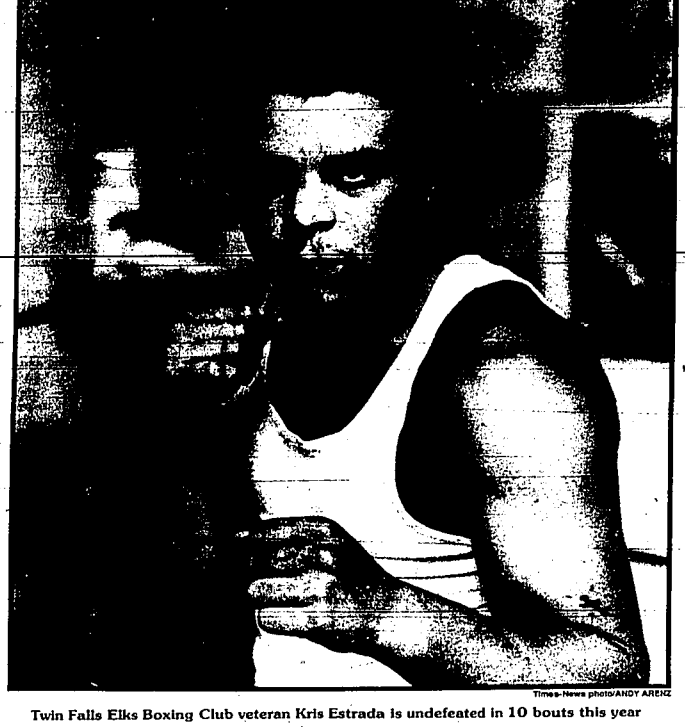

"I like boxing; it's fun," said Estrada.

An 11-year veteran of the sport is Johnny Valdez, 21, of Rupert. Valdez fights in the 139-pound senior division and was runnerup in the state Golden Gloves tournament this year. He was not in great shape this year, said Turley, because he was stricken with hives.

"He would have won if he had been in better shape," Turley said.

"I would like to go to the Olympics," said Valdez.

Craig Bartlett, 14; Ernie Gonzalez, 11, and Kevin Capps, 12, are three Elks boxers who have won Snake River Association Junior Olympic championships.

Salaries

Hadley was to present his paper last week to the Society of American Baseball Research in Albany, N.Y.

"There are a whole lot of motivations for doing this," he said. "I thought it would be interesting for baseball fans. And also I thought it might be interesting to owners and managers and maybe to players."

Hadley looked at 1988 salaries and compared them to player performances in 1987. His sample included 313 major league hitters who had at least 100 at bats, and 210 pitchers who pitched at least 50 innings.

Experience tended to be the biggest-determining-factor-in-pay, Hadley said, with salaries steadily increasing for 11 years before falling off.

Performance variables for hitters included batting average, hits, home runs, RBIs, runs scored and stolen bases. Strikeouts and bases on balls did not play a statisically significant role in pay, Hadley said.

According to his calculations, a home run counts for an extra $4,283 in a player's paycheck. In other words, a player should expect his salary to increase by that much the following year if he hit five home runs per-100 at bats, when his career average was only four.

According to Hadley's computerizations, a hit is worth $1,322, a run batted in $1,452, a run scored $1,096 and a stolen base $713.

For pitchers, variables include wins, strikeouts, saves, complete games and earned run average. Losses and bases on balls were statistically insignificant, he said.

According to Hadley, the most underpaid player is Toronto pitcher Mike Flanagan, who makes $550,000 but is worth $1.1 million. Next is Eric Davis, who should command $1.4 million but is paid $899,000.

Variables used by Hadley indicate Ozzie Smith is the most overpaid player, picking up a paycheck of $2.3 million when his predicted salary is only $915,000. Others in this group, Hadley said, include Chicago Cubs pitcher Rick Sutcliffe and New York Mets catcher Gary Carter. Sutcliffe's predicted salary is $937,000, but he makes $2.1 million. Carter makes $2.2 million but his predicted pay is only $1 million.

Hadley concedes that his equation doesn't include intangibles.

Rose

the hearing's outcome is a foregone conclusion. If found to have bet on baseball games, Rose could be suspended for a year. He could be banned for life if found to have bet on games involving the Cincinnati Reds, the team Rose manages.

Nadel, who faces an election next year, has declined to talk to reporters since his ruling.

Even if the donations were small, said Janet Lewis, executive director of the Ohio Common Cause, "there is still the perception by the voters that a judge who receives donations during a campaign may be expected to respond."

Witt

what I miss," she said. "It's the result that I miss. In my skating now, I have no result."

During her years at the top of her game, Witt was closely monitored by her skating coach, the famous Mita Mueller. Now the choreography and the music are her own choices; her current routine includes a conga and music from the Andrew Lloyd Webber musical Les Miserables.

"I miss her," Witt said of Frau Mueller. "We're still friends. She came and saw me skate in Korea."

Unlike the great East German figure skaters of the past, Witt hasn't settled down into coaching in her country's vast, state-funded national sports training program.

"I will skate for another few years, but after that, I don't know," she said. "I don't want to teach, but I'm still young. I don't have to decide yet."

But she added she will eventually return to East Germany, whose environment she credits for her skating success.

"My parents never pushed me into skating. I started because there was a skating rink near my kindergarten," she said. "I don't think you can be a great skater if your parents have to push you. You have to want to do it yourself.

"I think it is harder in America because parents have to pay a lot and they expect something back," she added. "The kids have to be pushed."

Not surprisingly, Witt predicts one of her countrywomen will supplant her as the next Olympic champion.

"We have several young skaters who are really good," she said. "They have a good combination of athletics and style, not like (current world champion Midori) Ito (known for her acrobatic jumps). There should be more skating and not so much jumps."

For Witt, the touring will run out long before the skating.

"I miss my friends and I miss my boyfriend," she said. "Going all over the world is exciting, but I miss my family. My parents are with me here. It's the first time they have been in America.

"Once, I went with friends to a disco and someone said we had been to this disco before," she said. "I said, 'no, that was in Washington.' They said 'this is Washington.'"

Mack

Detective Michael Carosielli said Mack was behind the wheel of the car, a woman was in the front passenger seat and a man was in the rear seat. Both were taken into custody along with Mack.

"We saw what we thought was an exchange (of drugs)," Carosielli said. "We saw an exchange between a female in the front seat and a guy in the back seat. We saw him handing her something.

"After we saw the possible exchange, we walked up and observed. He (the man in the back seat) had a crumpled-up rock of cocaine in his lap. It was loose. He might have been showing it to her. It was on his lap.

"He was trying to tuck it under his body on the seat (when police approached) to get it out of sight."

Browns' owner Art Modell learned of the arrest when he returned early today from a business trip to Dallas.

"I know Kevin Mack," Modell said. "He's very, very fine person and what this is all about is a shock to all of us."

Mack, a native of Kings Mountain, N.C., was selected by the Browns in the 1984 supplemental draft out of Clemson.

Last season, Mack carried carrying the ball 123 times for 485 yards, tied with Tim Manoa for a team-leading 3.9 per-carry average. Mack scored three touchdowns and also caught 11 passes for 87 yards.

Mack was plagued with injuries last season, missing all or part of 10 games plus the wild-card playoff game against Houston.

A Cleveland Browns safety, Don Rogers, died of a cocaine overdose three years ago Tuesday in Carmichael, Calif.

Watchers (Maass)."

Freter's time of 2 hours, 50.32 seconds is seven minutes off last year's winning time for this stage, but it gave Freter a 30-second bonus, boosting her to 10th overall in the 74-woman race.

Team Lowrey had two finishers in the top five with Matthes finishing fourth and teammate and point leader Jane Marshall in fifth place.

"It was team strategy. It was important for Team Lowrey to do well and get a time bonus," said Matthes, whose Lowrey's team picked up 27 seconds for the race. "It's exciting to come home to a big crowd. You want to do well in front of your hometown crowd.

The two main groups turned into one group as the bikers came down Galena Summit.

"One the sprint, there were 12 of us," said Matthes, who is participating in her sixth Challenge. "Then there were 25, so it was 12 against 25 and I didn't even see her (Freter)."

Lowrey's 1 minute-plus lead going into Thursday's competition was cut to a mere 38 seconds going into Friday's two stages.

Marshall, who was trailing by more than a minute before Thursday's race cut leader Lisa Brambani's lead to 51 seconds. Matthes' impressive finish put her 54 seconds off the pace as Brambani failed to finish in the top eight.

Today, the eighth day of this event, racers will face the Sun Valley Individual Time Trials, a 3.25-mile head-to-head race on Trail Creek Road, at 10 a.m. At 6 this evening, they will compete in the 1.6-mile Elkhorn Circuit Race.

The Challenge comes to the Magic Valley for the first time in its history Saturday for the 46-mile Clear Springs Trout Magic Valley Road Race, from Bliss to Twin Falls.

Cowboys

Bob Jenco followed with a two-bagger to leftcenter. After Boomer Walker drew a walk, Poulton got the next two Cowboys out but Jay Sheppard and John Horner followed with base hits to send the final two runs across.

An inning later, winning ptticher Chris Smith got it doing with a single and Bollinger lined his second double inside the first base line. Bobby Jenco reached base on a dropped third strike and Walker then laced a two-run single into center. A bases-loaded walk to Horner plated the final run.

But after that, Poulton found his pitching string. He struck out five of the next eight outs, although an error and a wild pitch plus Horner's second single added up to another run in the fourth. He allowed just four base runners thereafter.

The Sage chipped back in the first when Kent Schow, who was 3-for-3, singled, stole second and third and scored on John Curuhet's sacrifice fly. In the second, Dave Jensen doubled and Brett Horner picked up the RBI with a single.

Smith then coasted through the next three innings, allowing just one base runner.

But it got harder in the sixth when the Sage scored three times on five hits and left the bases loaded at the end.

Curutchek and Jensen singled and the bases became loaded when Jake Garro walked. Singles by Jason Allen and Brett Horner accounted for a run each and, after a stricke out, Schow's third hit of the game sent in another.

Twin Falls switched to Brad Herd for the last three inning and he had to extricate himself from a bases-loaded situation in the eighth to register the save.

VanEvery said he saw some pluses among his young player, noting "we played good defense today. We just need to start hitting the ball better. Danny threw a great game over the last six or seven innings but we have to hold people to five or less runs to have a chance of winning until we can get our offense going."

The loss dropped Minico to 4-9 overall, 1-4 in league games.

Minico will host the Boise Senators in a non-league twinbill today at 4 p.m.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

BOBBY WOLFF

"Life is a jest, and all things show it; I thought so once, but now I know it."
— John Gay

"What a joke," exclaimed an unhappy South. "I go down at four hearts and Eddie Expert made five. I'd like to know how he did it."

The jump to game was a little pushy, but with excellent controls and a good fit in North's suits (negative double). South took a gamble that was not unreasonable.

At the first table, dummy's spade ace won, and South played trumps immediately, the heart jack going to West's king. The spade queen forced dummy to ruff and South belatedly tried the clubs, trapping East's king twice. Another heart brought bad news and the defenders' final total was two hearts and two diamonds for one down.

Eddie Expert didn't play hearts at trick two. He finessed twice in clubs and led a low heart toward dummy. West took his king and punched dummy with a spade. (Had West ducked his trump king, East could have given him a club ruff, but South would still have 10 tricks via a diamond endplay.) Dummy's trump jack was finessed successfully, and South led a diamond back to his 10 and West's jack. West was now forced to surrender a free diamond finesse or offer a ruff and discard, limiting the defense to only one heart and one diamond.

To make his game, Eddie Expert used common sense. He had more than one way to play the trump suit; he had only one way to play the clubs. Why not adopt the line that would accommodate both suits?

Music Fest '89 concert planned for tonight

TWIN FALLS — Students and clinicians from Music Fest '89 will present a concert at 7:30 tonight in the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Auditorium. The recital marks the end of the annual week-long music camp for junior and senior high school students.

Instructors include Mark Neiwirth, Idaho Falls; James Keezer, Oakley; Alan Hale, Rupert; Skip Leone, Burley; Craig Purdy, Boise; Margaret Fogwell, Ketchum; and Marty Mead, Twin Falls.

Admission is $5, and proceeds will fund scholarships for next year's camp. People holding Arts on Tour season tickets will be admitted with their season pass.

Kim Kimerling, a well-known Southwest artist and 1949 graduate of Filer High School, plans three shows in the Magic Valley this weekend.

Now living and working in the Hualapai Mountains near Kingman, Ariz., Kimerling will exhibit his works through tonight at the New Life Living Center on Stevens Avenue, Filer; on Saturday at the Twin Falls Elks Club, where the Filer Class of '49 is having its reunion; and Sunday at Buhl's Statehood Day celebration.

Kimerling has been working as an artist and art educator for more than 30 years. He taught at the University of Nigeria and served as art educator for the state of Oregon in 1979-1980. He has had about 150 one-man shows of his art.

Among Kimerling's latest work is the Anasazi Series of handmade and hand-cast paper collages that include paper and plant fibers embellished by feathers, arrowheads, crystals, bits of shell and semi-precious stones.

'Preppy killer' is subject of 2 dueling docudramas

HOLLYWOOD — So-called "Preppy Killer" Robert E. Chambers Jr. — who pleaded guilty last year in the strangulation death of Jennifer Levin in New York's Central Park in 1986 — is the subject of dueling docudramas: "The Preppy Murder," a two-hour TV movie for ABC, is currently casting, with filming to begin in New York in August. Meanwhile, a script for a (yet untitled) four-hour CBS miniseries has been approved, though production has yet to be given the green light.

Acknowledging that his ABC project will be the first out of the gate, executive producer Jack Grossbart said that rights were bought from some of the police detectives involved in the case, and "a great many of Robert and Jennifer's friends." Investigative reporter Sydell Albert, who brought the rights to Grossbart, is co-producing. Court transcripts are also being used to tell the story "of kids who live a life without margin," Grossbart said.

Holy Batmania!

Twin Falls fans line up to see popular movie

By GARRISON WELLS
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Zap! Pow! Holy bat-megahit!

Batmania has hit Twin Falls.

Don Campbell, in charge of theater operations for Interstate Amusement Inc., said Thursday the bat-flick is bringing out the bat-maniacs.

"Customers have shown up wearing Batman T-shirts, the caps, the pins. That's why I say Batmania has arrived," Campbell said from his bat-office at the Twin Cinema Six.

The movie racked up $42.7 million in its nationwide debut weekend, topping Indian Jones and the Last Crusade, $29.47 million; Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom, $33.94 million; Beverly Hills Cop 2, $33.01 million and Return of the Jedi, $30.49 million.

Twin Falls' best-ever releases differ slightly with ET, the first Indiana Jones and The Return of the Jedi on top. Campbell said he believes Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade will join the list of Twin Falls megahits.

The city's summer releases also differ slightly from the nationwide trend, with Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade leading the list; followed by Batman, Ghostbusters II, Star Trek IV and Honey, I Shrunk the Kids, which Campbell feels could be the sleeper hit of the year.

Driving the Batman popularity are the characters — especially Jack Nicholson as The Joker — and Batman fan memory, Campbell said.

"From our opening weekend, we saw the 13-20 age group, but we are also seeing the mid 30s, 30-35, who grew up with Batman as a super hero. I remember the Batman serials as a kid," Campbell said. "It's the good guy against the bad guy. We all grow up with the superheroes.

"The audience reaction is positive. They like the show. They say its fun. All ages are having that reaction," he said.

'It's like being a kid again. It's like all this hype was made just for me.' – Zack Sinclair, 'Batman' fan

Zack Sinclair, 19, of Twin Falls, is a self-professed "definite Batman fan," who said the advertisements for the movie seemed as if they were aimed solely at him.

"It's like being a kid again. It's like all this hype was made just for me," he said.

The hype worked. Sinclair saw Batman three times in four days.

He watched it for the first time on opening night, repeated that the next night, took a one-night bat-break and then went to see the movie again.

"I'm a movie nut," Sinclair said. "It's like the old Batman. I just had to see what they were doing with the characters. These are one-of-a-kind characters."

Sinclair said he went to the movie the second time to see if he might discover some new things. He didn't.

"It reaffirmed my feelings of the first movie," he said. "I noticed a lot of the cues and some of the behavior the third time."

Matt Allen, 19, a Twin Falls resident who is attending the University of Puget Sound, saw Batman twice.

"It's a sleek picture," Allen said. "I just liked the look of it, I guess you could say. It's not really an in-depth show."

Both Allen and Sinclair have their bat-memories remembering that they watched reruns of the 1960s Batman television series.

"I always liked the TV show," Allen said.

So does Sinclair, who recalled "all the bat-paraphernalia. The Joker, The Riddler, Catwoman, all those things."

'Rhinestone Cowboy' plans Jackpot concert

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

JACKPOT — "Rhinestone Cowboy," "Southern Nights," "I Have You" and "Hall of Fame for Mamas" are the type of smooth, philosophical songs Glen Campbell likes to sing.

"I don't really do any of the 'Darlin' I'm So Lonely, You Broke My Heart I Want to Break Your Jaw' " type of songs," Campbell said in a recent telephone interview.

The country star says he tries to avoid lyrics such as, "My truck broke down and you went out on me and left me so lonely and blue."

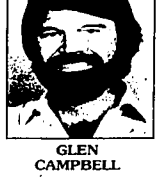

His most recent recording is an orchestrated gospel album called "Glen Campbell's Favorite Hymns featuring Tall Oak Tree."

An Arkansas native, one of 12 children, Campbell is now a resident of Phoenix with his wife, Kim. He says one of his greatest joys is raising his children, ages six, four and two. He also spends a good deal of his time with his four older children.

GLEN CAMPBELL

"I think I've mellowed," he says, comparing his new way of life to the less stable years of his career. "I think I've grown up finally."

Campbell, 53, says the turning point in his life was becoming a Christian, and Jesus was easy to find.

"All you have to do is ask Him to come into your life and He will, and He did," Campbell says. "I quit drinking two years ago. He just flat delivers."

For pleasure, the slender, bearded singer plays golf, stays off horses and plays with his kids.

"And my main fun is on stage," he says. "That's where I know what I'm doing. I don't always do it right, but at least I know what I'm doing."

Comparing it to golf, Campbell says his last two years on stage have been sub-par.

"It's been just marvelous," he says, admitting that he used to feel very paranoid and be full of fear in front of audiences.

"I've overcome that," Campbell says with confidence. "I'm much more loose on stage, much more at ease."

Classical songs, a medley of tunes from his days as one of the Beach Boys and yodeling are included in Campbell's stage show. His other smooth, philosophical songs include "Still Within the Sound of My Voice," "Country Boy," "Galveston," "Wichita Lineman" and "Try a Little Kindness."

"And I play bagpipes, among other things," he says. "I guess it's in my blood. Scottish. The Campbells of Argyll."

As a child, little Glen began to play guitar at age four.

"I don't remember not playing a guitar," he says.

As a teen-ager, Campbell left Arkansas in the early '50s to pursue a musical career. His first job as a guitarist was with a three-piece band in Houston, Texas. Thereafter he was part of a country group led by his uncle, Dick Bills, which toured the bar circuits of the Southwest. Young Glen's reputation as a guitar player spread and he was encouraged to move to the West Coast.

At 24, he headed for Los Angeles with $300 in his pocket and a small trailer filled with his belongings. Soon he was playing guitar on the records of artists as diverse as Frank Sinatra, Nat King Cole, Merle Haggard, Elvis Presley, Ray Charles and the Mamas and the Papas. He toured with the Beach Boys, filling in for Brian Wilson in 1965.

But it was the folk-flavored John Hartford tune, "Gentle on My Mind," which boosted Campbell as an artist in 1967. Four months later came "By The Time I Get To Phoenix" and his success was confirmed. These hits earned Campbell four Grammies in 1968. That same year, he was chosen as Entertainer of the Year by the Academy of Country Music.

Campbell has recorded more than 40 albums with four gold singles, 12 gold albums and seven platinum albums. Films include "True Grit" and "Norwood" with his boyhood hero, John Wayne. Live appearances have taken him from Las Vegas to Carnegie Hall and to international stages.

From 1969 to 1972, he hosted "The Glen Campbell Goodtime Hour" on television, a

Local stores don't plan to rent controversial 'Temptation'

By JULIE FANSELOW SWETYE
Times-News writer

Videocassette emporiums in southcentral Idaho are resisting "Temptation."

One of the most controversial movies in history, "The Last Temptation of Christ," crept onto the home video market Thursday. But film fans who had hoped to view the Martin Scorsese movie aren't likely to find it at any area video store.

"The Last Temptation of Christ" was released to the theatrical market last summer amid howls of protests nationwide. It was shown in Boise and Salt Lake City, but it did not play the Magic Valley.

Several area churches and religious-based businesses led petition drives at that time to protest the Universal Studios release. Video store owners say no organized opposition has surfaced to greet the MCA Home Video version, although individuals have registered complaints in many stores.

"Normally, it's not our job to decide what's a good movie and what's not a good movie," says Bob Watts of Video West in the Blue Lakes Mall. "But on this one — and this is the only one in six years except X-rated movies, which we don't carry at all — we've elected not to carry it."

"We don't want to take the risk of offending any of our customers," Watts says.

'Normally, it's not our job to decide what's a good movie and what's not a good movie... We don't want to take the risk of offending any of our customers.' –Bob Watts, of Video West store

Only about a dozen customers have spoken out either for or against the film, but those who do express strong opinions.

"It seems there is no middle ground," he adds.

Lorna Gillette — who owns the Video West stores in Twin Falls and in Burley, Rupert, Boise and Payson, Utah — also is president of the Idaho chapter of the Video Software Dealers Association, a national trade organization.

She says she knows of no dealer in southcentral Idaho planning to stock the film. Two dealers in Boise may possibly be offering the film, she adds.

Pay-cable services also seem to be avoiding the film, which was based on a novel by Nikos Kazantzakis. None of the channels carried by King Videocable has plans to air the movie soon, a company spokeswoman says.

Idaho Home Theatre owner Bill Mogensen says the Starion non-cable movie channel may air "Last Temptation" in the near future. But if it does, he says he'll preempt it and show another movie instead.

At Great American Video on Blue Lakes Boulevard, manager Mike Howard says people have asked for the film and that there's been little opposition voiced to the video's release.

But that, he says, may be due to the lack of publicity by MCA Home Video, the company releasing the tape.

"There's been no advertising, absolutely no media push," Howard says. "People aren't aware that it's coming out."

Repeated calls to MCA Home Video's publicity director in Los Angeles have gone unanswered. A short item in the July issue of Video magazine, however, confirms MCA's plans to downplay the film, noting, "Don't expect to see cardboard saviors propped near the

An Old Fashioned Buffalo Feed is among the events slated July 8 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. The menu will feature buffalo (with regular beef available, too), scalloped potatoes, salads, vegetables and melons. The cost will be $5.50 for adults and $2.50 per child, with a family price of $20 also available.

On both July 7 and July 8, Smoke 'n' Thunder will play from 7 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. and patrons can boogie the night away on a 10,000-square-foot dance floor. Contests and prizes will be featured. Cost is $2.50 per person.

Other attractions will include performances by the Fort Hall Indian Tribal Dancers and a variety of concessions.

Jerry Lee Young's Idaho Heritage Musuem is located midway between Twin Falls and Jackpot on Route 93. For more information, call 655-4444.

TV shows look at measurements other than the Nielsen ratings

By The Baltimore Evening Sun

"Television is a game of numbers, and the ones that matter most are the ratings numbers from the A.C. Nielsen people. But there are some other measurements taken about television that are interesting to contemplate.

For example, the Nickelodeon cable channel for children last weekend disclosed the results of its annual "Kid's Choice" survey of youthful tastes in not only TV but other corners of the entertainment arena as well. And a whimsical case could be made that the kids voted for two favorite actors who are not actors at all.

The top TV actor, for example, was "ALF," whose performance in the hit NBC series is really a multi-person amalgam of puppetry, voice and stunt work inside a stuffy suit.

And the favorite movie actor was Arnold Schwarzenegger! Unlike ALF, the one-time bodybuilder is at least a human, a superb specimen, in fact, and is undeniably a movie star.

Youth is not very discriminating.

In a more serious numbers game, the Virginia-based Viewers for Quality Television organization recently released its own ratings and quality survey taken during the first week of May, the big "sweeps" month of such importance in the Nielsen measurements.

The independent poll, says VQT director, Dorothy Swanson, is not intended as a substitute for Nielsen, but rather, "to show the networks there are viewers out there watching quality shows."

VQT's survey comprised responses from about 1,000 members, in comparison to the approximately 4,000 households measured by Nielsen. And a look at the top 15 shows in both polls for the week of May 1-7 makes the point there are many audiences out there, not merely one mass public.

Of Nielsen's top 15, only five series were also on the VQT most-watched list: "L.A. Law," "The Wonder Years," "The Golden Girls," "Cheers" and "Roseanne." Left out by the Nielsen numbers but ranking in VQT's top five were, in order, "Murphy Brown," "Designing Women," "Newhart" and "China Beach" (with the aforementioned "L.A. Law" in third place).

Even more intriguingly, VQT respondents provided a separate "qualitative rating" for the shows they watched during the week. And only two of their top 15, "The Wonder Years" and "Roseanne," were also in the Nielsen top 15 rated shows.

What were the best five shows of the week according to the VQT survey? In order, "China Beach," "The Wonder Years," "Beauty and the Beast," "Wiseguy" and "thirtysomething."

Swanson concedes the need for networks to have some way of measuring who is watching what. But she would like to see less reliance on the Nielsens alone in the making of schedule decisions, and some consideration given to measurements of other audiences, such as that reached by the VQT survey.

checkout lines."

"I've got to believe they wrote the Bill of Rights so we could watch what we want to watch," Howard says.

But Great American's distributor, Best Video of Salt Lake City, is not carrying the film. There are five Great American Video outlets in Idaho, and none will carry the tape, Howard adds.

He says he has heard of a Salt Lake City video retailer who announced publicly that his store would carry the tape. That retailer has since received death threats and his store has been the target of vandalism, Howard says.

Ron McMillan, vice president and general manager of Best Video, says his company is trying to avoid subjecting its dealers to that kind of harassment by declining to stock the tape.

Half the distributors in the nation are refusing to carry the tape, he adds.

Video II, a Salt Lake-based video rack jobber that supplies video departments in Albertson's stores in 10 states, also decided against offering "Temptation." Jerry Spencer, Video II's president, says the company received numerous petitions, letters and phone calls protesting the tape.

Carla Hendricks, purchasing agent for Video West stores in Ketchum and Bellevue and Foto Video in Hailey, says people in the Wood River Valley have been talking about the film — some asking for it, some protesting its release. But her distributors are not offering it, she notes, so the stores will not carry it.

project he doubts he will ever do again.

"It's too much work," Campbell says. "It's definitely a six day a week job. Seven, actually.

"I enjoy playing in front of a live audience more so than I do doing TV," he says. "And TV eats up so much material so fast. That's why variety shows only last three years, or four years at the most, on a steady basis.

"In three and a half years, you've used up every guest star and every bit of material."

After spending the month of April singing in England, Campbell took a short break and began a tour in this country on May 31. After spending a week at Harrah's in Reno, he will perform tonight and tomorrow night at Cactus Pete's in Jackpot and then continue touring until July 3. His usual schedule is to tour half of each year and spend the other half looking for songs, recording albums, appearing on TV and doing radio shows.

Campbell says he's not a country singer per se, he's just a country boy who sings.

"When you grow up milking cows and picking cotton and gathering corn, it stays with you," he says. "I think what you learn as a child definitely stays with you; the way you think and the way you go.

"When people come to see Glen Campbell, that's what the see," he says. "They don't see Glen Campbell trying to be somebody else, because I probably do me better than anybody."

Batman

Allen and Sinclair also happen to prefer the new Batman, played by Michael Keaton, over the old Batman, played by Adam West.

"I like this Batman," Sinclair said. "He's more tough whereas the other guy was just a funny comedian."

"This one is a real he-man" agreed Sinclair. "This is the good guy against the bad guy."

According to Campbell, odds are good that Batman II, or The Son of Batman, or Batman the Sequel will hit soon.

"I've heard there are going to be more two more films," he said.

And Sinclair and Allen both expect to be there for the sequel.

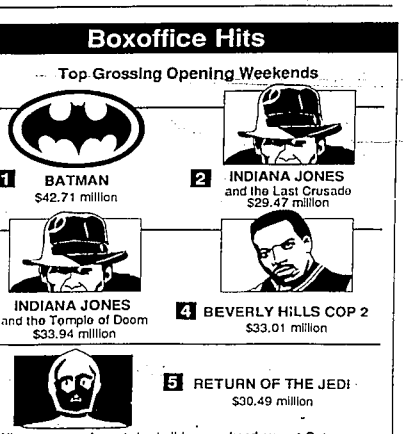

But for now, they are undecided whether or not they will see the first Batman again. Batmania, apparently, has its limits.

But, he added, "I'm a little Batmanned out right now."

Batman (Michael Keaton) stands next to the powerful Batmobile

Movie career began in the junkyard for 'Batman' star

Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — Many movie careers end on the Hollywood scrap heap.

Here is one that began in a London junk yard — with the buying, stripping, stretching and recycling of two rusted 1968 Chevrolet Impalas into identical Batmobiles, the co-star and stunt double that will appear as one ugly urban battle wagon in the movie "Batman."

With a Durante nose cone drooping from a circle of turbine blades, the car looks like it is pushed by a jet engine and is supersonic in second gear.

It actually is powered by an elderly Chevy 327 V8 with automatic transmission, and, said production designer Anton Furst, the dummy snoot "came off a Rolls-Royce Olympus Spey engine ... the turbine blades are from a Harrier (fighter-bomber) jet."

Warner Bros. press releases say that the Batmobile is supercharged and has a top speed so impressive it is "not available to the public."

In truth, it is slower than a Honda Civic and is neither turbocharged nor supercharged.

"We had 92.7 (mph) from the No. 1 car on a Ministry of Works test track," said John Evans, the special effects supervisor who built the cars. "Then it obviously began to shake a bit. The No. 2 (car) was a bit of a pig ... very rough to drive."

But what of afterburner flames shooting from the exhaust? "Air and paraffin (kerosene) mix released and ignited under pressure," Evans said.

Bodywork of armor-plated steel? "Kevlar," Furst said. "John Lovell, who does Group C racing cars mostly, did the bodywork."

For this Warner Bros. movie, eight blocks of all-American Gotham City were built on a 95-acre back lot of very-British Pinewood Studios. Two stately homes of England — Hatfield House and Knebworth — were merged into one Wayne Manor. An abandoned London power station was converted into headquarters for the Joker's crime cartel.

And the slick, rat-black, great brute of a Batmobile began life as a pair of beaters (reportedly the London leavings of homebound American GIs) Evans purchased from a junk dealer for $5,500 apiece.

"It's quite a heavy film, actually, so we wanted a very heavy car, frankly, to go with it," Furst said. "We went about that by thinking of it as an expression of the war machine ... literally, he (Batman) uses it like a war machine, an extension of his armor, really."

Furst said that he only glanced at designs of earlier cars — the original Batmobile as drawn in DC Comics, and its most famous interpretation, the double bubble-canopied Batmobile built for the 1965-68 television series.

Shooting for television actually required five Batmobiles, all built by Kustom King George Barris of Los Angeles.

The Who, Doobie Brothers top list of summer reunion tours

GLENS FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Rock 'n' roll relics are dusting off their guitars and banging their drums quickly for a spate of reunion tours this summer, starting with Wednesday's debut of The Who talking 'bout their generation.

The Who, which splintered after a "farewell tour" in 1982, reassembled at the small Glen Falls Civic Center in upstate New York arena with a series of songs from the nearly two-decade-old rock opera, "Tommy."

The Who is just one group planning a revival in the coming months. The Rolling Stones will be touring this fall and former Beatle Ringo Starr is going on his first solo tour, as will veterans like Billy Preston, Joe Walsh, Clarence Clemons and former Band members.

Other bands from the 1970s that had long since broken up, such as the Doobie Brothers and the Allman Brothers, are planning reunion tours.

The Who have scheduled concerts in 36 stadiums across the country this summer in a tour marking the band's 25th anniversary. They'll also do two special charity performances of "Tommy" at indoor venues in New York and Los Angeles.

It all started Wednesday when Pete Townshend, dressed in a baggy gray suit with his hair swept back in a ponytail, grimaced as he sang a high note in "1921," one of "Tommy's" opening songs.

A crowd of slightly more than 5,000 roared when singer Roger Daltrey shattered one pair of tambourines and then tossed it aside.

A giant video screen designed for stadiums beamed close-ups of the band and a series of colorful flags stitched together served as a stage backdrop.

In a three-hour show, The Who performed their classics "Who Are You," "Substitute," "My Generation," "Won't Get Fooled Again," and "Baba O'Riley." They played 38 songs and two acts.

A June 23 show in Toronto, the city where the band played its last show in 1982, was originally scheduled to be the tour opener. But the band added Wednesday night's performance as a warm up.

The band's tour has been criticized by some in the music community, who note that members Townshend, John Entwistle and Daltrey haven't had nearly the same financial success with individual tours and records as they did with The Who.

The cover of the current Musician magazine, for instance, shows a drawing of the three band members as the centerpiece of a large dollar bill.

Tickets sales have indeed been brisk. Tickets here sold out within 82 minutes of being offered for sale.

The three remaining original members of the band were supplemented by drummer Simon Phillips, keyboard player John Bundrick and guitarist Steve Bolton.

The band has no new album out but they plan to release the record "The Iron Man" next month.

Sun Valley Music Festival begins July 8

By BARBARA NEIWERT
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — The hot months of July and August are going to be even hotter with the 8th Annual Sun Valley Music Festival.

The festival will bring in seven of the top-name jazz groups and chamber musicians.

The festival begins July 8 with a rousing outdoor performance by Herbie Mann and Jasil Brazz at 6:30 p.m. at the Trail Creek Cabin Grounds. New to the concert series this year is a no-host gourmet grill and bar service available beginning at 5 p.m. Picnics are welcome on the grounds as well.

At 59, Herbie Mann is a master musician and jazz flute virtuoso who is largely responsible for introducing the world to the flute as a jazz instrument, a fact that, with characteristic modesty, he claims happened more by chance than design.

Mann has always been on the forefront of musical trends.

In the early 60s he gave audiences their first taste of the romance of Brazilian rhythms, inspiring many imitators. His search for musical inspiration has led him to work with a variety of different groups such as The Byrds, Emerson, Lake and Palmer, Albert Lee, Mick Taylor, and Duane Allman.

By 1970, Mann had five albums in the top 20 of Billboard magazine's jazz charts, followed by a Top 20 pop hit, "Hijack," and later with "Superman."

His two latest albums, "Herbie Mann and Jasil Brazz," released in 1987 and the most recent, "Opalescence," released late last year, certainly justify his claim in a recent Jazztimes interview that "my music now is the best it's ever been."

Mann's drive to experiment and create in many different musical arenas has earned him the admiration and respect of his contempories, one of whom is John Coltrane, the great saxophonist. Mann's enthusiasm for new ideas and new inspirations continues unabated, with his interests currently in the wealth of music from New Orleans.

Other members of his current group include Marc Cohen on keyboards, Romero Lubambo on guitar, Paul Socolow on bass, Ricky Sebastian on drums, and Cypro Baptista on percussions.

The Sun Valley Music Festival is sponsored by the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities. Adult tickets are $12 or $10 for Center members, and young people age 18 and under are $5 or $4 for Center members. Tickets may by purchased in Hailey at the Sound Socket, in Ketchum at the Sun Valley Center, Chapter One Bookstore and Magic Mountain Music, and in Sun Valley at Ex Libris Bookstore.

Julie Scott is featured artist at Sun Valley show

The Times-News

KETCHUM — Local artist Julie Scott will be the featured artist for the July show at the Sun Valley Center Gallery, showing from July 7 through Aug. 1. An opening reception is scheduled for July 7 from 6 p.m to 9 p.m.

Scott's impressionistic paintings continue to gather substantial acclaim and recognition, regionally and nationally. Her work was recently exhibited at the Koplin Gallery in Los Angeles at which time the Los Angeles Times reported "Scott's paintings wage a range war of cryptic but dire inflection...she renders the ground a desolate hotbed of vibrantly painted symbols and marks."

Her work has been included in several prestigious exhibitions, including "Talent for the 80's," a collection assembled by The Federal Reserve Board in Washington, D.C., and in "Field & Stream: 16 Pacific Northwest Artists."

Scott also continues to pursue serious illustration where she is able to project her remarkable wit. Such work has appeared in Outside, Playboy, and the Washington Post Magazine.

In addition to Scott's latest paintings, this exhibit will feature a selection of the popular collaborative woodworks by Scott and Paul Bates.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECASTS

IF JUNE 30 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you do plenty of traveling, possess intellectual curiosity, are versatile and seldom read only one book at a time. You have marvelous sense of humor. You are capable of loving more than one person simultaneously. Gemini, Sagittarius individuals play important roles in your life. You'll be "away from home" in July. This "absence" represents combination of holiday and domestic adjustment. August represents power month which features production, career, love relationship.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Invitation extended three days ago is subject to "cancellation." Map your own plans —be with young persons, possibly family members. Short trip involved. Review resolutions concerning diet, nutrition.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Question of debt will be settled. Involves loan, property, collateral. You'll be popular as result, especially with woman relatives. None will be tempted to say, "I told you so!" Express gratitude.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Moon in your sign emphasizes color, personality, sex appeal. You'll be in mood to celebrate and some very gallant, hand-some people will help you do so. Display your colors: shades of silver, green, yellow.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): By waiting just three days circumstances will turn in your favor. Meantime, check references. Be aware of details, fine print. Telephone call to different area of city will provide key answers.

What's what

An ancient soap opera

First soap opera was the "Arabian Nights" otherwise known as "A Thousand and One Nights." Narrator was Scheherazade. Her husband was about to kill her. Kept postponing the dastardly deed. Every night she told him a story with a "to be continued" plot. He remained curious. Took her 1,001 episodes to soften up the old boy. Saga ended when he decided not to kill her after all.

It's typical of a dog to sleep 11 hours a day.

Q. What was the first hijacked airplane?

A. An airborne Catalina flying boat. Between Macao and Hong Kong in 1948. Four armed men jumped the crew and in the tumult killed the pilot. The ship went down, killing 26 people.

ANGER

"What's the use of getting angry?" Fairly common rhetorical question, that. Still, anger has its uses. Many a survivor wouldn't have survived without some fury. Claim is you may get angry by accident, but you stay angry on purpose. If you need it to do what has to be done.

What's art? Andre Gide said, "Art is a collaboration between God and the artist, and the less the artist does the better."

It's known the abacus was invented in Babylonia about a thousand years before it turned up in China. What's not known is how it got there. Any suggestions?

Hong Kong has almost but not quite twice as many people as New Zealand.

WHALE'S PULSE

Now that the marine scientists know how to take a whale's pulse, they report it's seven beats a minute.

"The Art of Decorating Dry Goods Windows and Interiors." You know who wrote that? An expert in such matters. L. Frank Baum. He also wrote "The Wonderful Wizard of Oz."

Almost but not quite half the world's newspapers are published in Canada and the United States.

It's said you forget 60 percent of what you hear, if typical, within 24 hours.

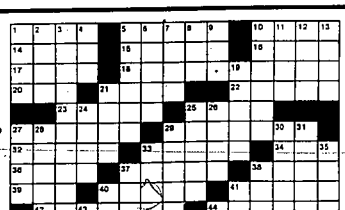

It was John Burroughs who said, "Our thoughts are our feelings gone to seed."

Despite good performances, 'Batman' is unsatisfying

Batman (Michael Keaton) confronts The Joker (Jack Nicholson)

By BOB THOMAS
The Associated Press

Review

First of all, Robin is a no-show. So you can forget all those snide cracks about the relationship between Batman and Robin.

Second, the picture is likely to be one of the summer's top money-makers, along with "Indiana Jones and The Last Crusade" and "Ghostbusters II." It has already broken records in its first three days. It has all the elements to wham the populace, and Warner Bros. is sparing no hype.

Now for the news. "Batman" is a massive production with the biggest collection of sets since "Cleopatra." It has a performance by Jack Nicholson at his most manic, and a more subtle portrayal by Michael Keaton. The special effects are neatly managed, and there is enough violence for a season of "Miami Vice." Why, then, is the film ultimately unsatisfying?

It's not easy to convert comic books to film. Far-out characters and violent action created by artists do not always translate to the big screen. Which way do you go: play it for laughs, like the self-mocking "Batman" TV series of 1968-69; or strive for a literal, realistic approach? The makers of the 1989 "Batman" can't seem to make up their minds.

Tim Burton, who came out of Disney animation, seemed an ideal choice as director. With "Pee-wee's Big Adventure" and especially "Beetlejuice," he exhibited rare, daring humor. But little of that emerges in "Batman." Burton seems overburdened with the logistics of an immensely costly production.

The plot is familiar stuff. Bruce Wayne is a rich citizen who leads a hidden life as avenger of the miscreants of Gotham City, which has plenty. The city is virtually run by mobster Jack Palance with his chief hitman, Jack Nicholson.

In a murderous encounter with Batman, Nicholson is seemingly killed when he falls into an acid vat. But he escapes, and plastic surgery turns his face into the hideous mask of The Joker. He jokes his way through a succession of mass and individual killings, Batman in pursuit. Meanwhile Bruce Wayne is pursued by an inquiring photographer, Kim Basinger.

The final clash takes place in a church belltower, and it employs every cliffhanger stunt in the film lexicon.

Nicholson is at his diabolical best, though his constant supply of jokes grows wearying. Keaton, one of the best new comic actors, appears overly restrained as Bruce Wayne and is necessarily unrecognizable as Batman. Kim Basinger is perfect as Vicki Vale. A welcome whimsy is the casting of an Ed Koch lookalike (Lee Wallace) as the whiny mayor of Gotham City. Especially good is Michael Gough as Wayne's ideal butler.

Jon Peters and Peter Guber produced "Batman," which was written by Sam Hamm and Warren Skaaren. The rating is PG-13 for violence and language. Running time: 125 minutes.

'Dead Calm' is smart, seductive movie

Reviews

Here are some capsule reviews of some of the movies now playing in the Magic Valley. Ratings are by the Motion Picture Association of America and the Los Angeles Times. Opinions are by Los Angeles Times reviewers.

DEAD CALM (R). Cracking-good thrillers are harder to find these days, possibly because the audiences for them seem to have gotten more demanding. Into this void sails "Dead Calm," a spare, smart, seductive piece of real movie making with (almost) every loophole covered, a superlative cast (Sam Neill, Nicole Kidman, Billy Zane) and enough tension to keep us all hyperventilating for hours. Directed by "Newsfront's" crackerjack Philip Noyce.

THE DEAD POETS SOCIETY (PG). Against the glacially perfect backdrop of a 1959 East Coast prep school, which director Peter Weir turns into an evil ice palace, star Robin Williams blazes like a poetry-spewing, stand-up comet: He is playing a rebel English teacher, whose motto is "Seize the day!" and who gets his students to drink a little too deeply from the Pierian Spring. Tom Schulman's brave, off-beat script has overly melodramatic twists, but it is a heartening cry of rage against conformism's brutalities and a moving elegy for every inspired teacher who made knowledge live. And, right now, Williams may be the most exciting performer in American movies.

THE DREAM TEAM (PG-13). Howard Zieff's new comedy is so clearly derived from the movie "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" that you might begin to wonder when Jack Nicholson will show up. This amiably slick farce stars Michael Keaton, Christopher Lloyd and Peter Boyle as a carnivorously funny trio with Stephen Furst playing the weakest role, although he has a great comic waddle, running along helplessly behind them like a chafed turtle.

EARTH GIRLS ARE EASY (PG). A jazzy, snazzy rock-musical comedy about a dumped-on Valley Girl (Geena Davis) who ushers three girl-crazy extraterrestrials around Los Angeles after they crash-land in her swimming pool. The material — script and songs by MTV's Julie Brown — is wedgie-thin and slushie-deep, but the virtuoso Julien Temple ("Absolute Beginners") turns Los Angeles into a candy-frosted, super-slick dream mall. He creams the whole city over with his visual wit and impudence, creates images that breathe in tempo with Brown's cute songs (" 'Cause I'm a Blonde"), or cut against them jaggedly. It is a classic case of a director triumphing over his material.

FIELD OF DREAMS (PG). A movie about crazy dreams and impossible reunions, "Field of Dreams" presents baseball as a kind of national sacrament, an instrument of near-holy reconciliation between the generations — with Kevin Costner as an ex-campus radical and Iowa farmer who receives heavenly instructions to construct a diamond in his cornfield and await some mysterious visitations. It is probably as heartfelt a movie as any major studio has given us recently, but the heartland setting is a little too underpopulated, the populist parable a little too bald, and the political conflicts avoided or softened. The movie doesn't quite reach the magical, Capra-esque fusion of fable and fantasy it wants.

FOR QUEEN AND COUNTRY (R). A vision of Mrs. Thatcher's England as utterly bleak and hopeless, its racism symptomatic of a rapidly accelerating disintegration. Denzel Washington is coolly charismatic as a young man who has left the service after eight years to find that for blacks nothing has changed, except to worsen.

'Batman' boosts industry to record weekend sales

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Batman" made more money in three days than most movies generate in their lifetimes, with a $42.7 million opening that broke a week-old record and drove the industry to a record $90 million-plus weekend.

Despite attracting less-than-overwhelming reviews, "Batman," starring Michael Keaton in the title role and Jack Nicholson as the Joker, set new marks for the best opening day with $15.3 million last Friday, according to figures released Monday. It also recorded the biggest Saturday at $14.6 million and Sunday at $12.7 million in movie history.

Those figures were rounded off; the exact figures yielded the $42.7 million gross, according to John Krier of Exhibitor Relations Co., which tracks box-office performance.

The previous opening-weekend record was set a week earlier by "Ghostbusters II," which grossed $29.5 million.

Overall, American and Canadian movie fans spent more than $95 million at theaters during the weekend, breaking yet another record by $3 million.

"This is tremendous. It is the biggest weekend ever in the history of the business," said Krier.

This summer's box office is now running 14 percent ahead of last year's record season of $1.7 billion, according to industry estimates.

The unprecedented popularity of Warner Bros.' "Batman" may even have helped the competition, as moviegoers — perhaps frustrated by unbearably long "Batman" lines at some of its 2,194 screens — dashed to Disney's modest comedy, "Honey, I Shrunk the Kids," in record numbers.

Single brothers treated like children by family members

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: A recent letter expressing concern regarding the manner in which a wedding invitation had been issued prompts me to write you about my objection to the way singles are often treated in that regard.

We have two sons, both past 35 and professional men, who are happily unmarried and have their own homes in cities many miles from ours.

Invitations for weddings, graduations and other occasions, as well as Christmas cards, often come to us with their names tacked on as if they were still children. Anyone who does not have their addresses could obtain them with a simple phone call. Instead, we seem to be expected to call them long-distance or write to them to relay the invitation or greeting. They, in turn, have made it a practice not to attend any function when invited in this manner.

On one family occasion they were seated at the "children's table" because they were unmarried! Their grandmother excluded them from her magazine gift subscription list, saying, "That is only for the married ones. They can read yours." (No mention was made of the miles between us.) Are single adults being treated in this manner for the purpose of saving the cost of an additional acknowledgment and postage stamp, or is it merely thoughtlessness on the part of the sender? Or are singles not considered valid social entities by some? Abby, please let your readers know that single adults are indeed adults and should be treated in an adult manner.

— STEAMED IN THE MIDWEST

DEAR STEAMED: You just did. And I couldn't have said it better. Thank's for writing.

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for your letter regarding the grandparents who failed to buckle up their grandbabies in their car seats. Parents have to get tough and absolutely insist that their little ones are buckled up whenever they ride in a car.

My smart daughter and her husband solved that problem by training their CHILD to insist on being buckled up. My 3-year-old grandson said to me, "Grandma, you can't go yet because you haven't buckled me up!" Train the children to DEMAND to be buckled up.

— PEGGY S. HENDRICK, SPRINGFIELD, MO.

DEAR PEGGY: Hooray for a great suggestion. Little ones are always taking orders — what a treat for them to be able to give one. Thank's for giving several million people a lifesaving idea. Readers, instruct your little ones to DEMAND to be buckled up – or nobody goes anywhere.

DEAR ABBY: The vacation season brings to mind an experience I had on consecutive trips to Europe several years ago.

The first trip, in France, the night before the bus driver was to leave, our tour group (which was flying to another city), the tour guide had some bad news: The driver's room had been burglarized, and all his money stolen! The people on our two-week tour had a meeting, and everyone agreed to double his tip.

The next year, in Greece, different tour guide, different driver, same bad luck before departure. Different, but sympathetic tourists. All except one. Just call me

Greenpeace becomes charity of choice for many rock singers

Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — "Rainbow Warriors" was one of the biggest selling albums of the year even before it hit the U.S. record shops this week.

That is because the collection — a two-record compilation featuring previously released tracks by more than two dozen of today's most prized rock acts — has sold 4 million copies in the Soviet Union since it was released there March 6.

The reason for the phenomenal Soviet sales: "Rainbow Warriors" is a breakthrough in a country that has been notoriously slow to accept contemporary rock.

While the collection is still not a total survey of what is happening today in rock (there is no heavy metal, rap or post-punk), the album does represent the first time Soviet record stores have carried an album that showcases what might best be described as "up-to-date rock."

Until now, rock albums — which have to be released in any quantity through Melodiya, the government record label — have either been decade-old collections by the likes of the Beatles or Moody Blues or the special Paul McCartney package of '50s rockers.

By contrast, the vinyl and cassette versions of "Rainbow Warriors" offers 17 selections, including such socially conscious works as U2's "Pride (In the Name of Love)," Peter Gabriel's "Red Rain," Sting's "Love Is the Seventh Wave," R.E.M.'s "It's the End of the World As We Know It," Lou Reed's "Last Great American Whale" and Bruce Hornsby's "Look Out Any Window." In addition, the CD version contains four additional tracks, including Hothouse Flowers' "Hard Rain" and Robbie Robertson's "Somewhere Down the Crazy River."

That sales explosion — another million copies are expected to be sold in the Soviet Union by Christmas — is exactly the excitement envisioned by the album's sponsor, Greenpeace, the international environmental advocacy organization.

"We always had a lot of rock artists giving donations, but we hadn't actually approached them for support before," Cornelia Durrant, chairman of Greenpeace in England and one of the key figures behind the album, said during a recent interview in London.

"Greenpeace is very keyed to creating our own publicity, so we haven't needed to use celebrities in the past, but we felt we needed their help this time. These rock artists are literally worshipped by young people in Russia and we saw them as our ticket into the country. It was a way to raise funds for the Greenpeace chapter there and draw attention to our goals."

Besides contributing tracks to the album, various bands — most notably R.E.M. on its recent arena tour — have allowed Greenpeace volunteers to distribute informational material at their concerts.

This involvement, in effect, has made Greenpeace the rock community's new charity of choice, assuming the position held in recent years by Amnesty International. The latter involvement was climaxed by an unprecedented five-continent tour featuring Bruce Springsteen, Peter Gabriel and Sting.

Ironically, Durant said, the rash of rock benefits — from Live Aid through the Amnesty tour — had made Greenpeace wary of turning to the musicians for support.

"The more people use a particular device or method for promoting issues, the less effective it becomes over time. People get a bit bored with it. It's like, 'Oh, here come the rock stars again ...' and they tune out," she said.

But Ian Flooks, one of England's leading rock agents and the album's executive producer, said that the rock connection was perfect for what the organization wanted to do in the Soviet Union.

"We wanted to find a way of raising money for Greenpeace outside of any government influence ... as many individual donations from as large a number of people as possible," he said.

Steffi Graf, Ivan Lendl are 2 to beat at this year's Wimbledon tournament

By ARI HOOGENBOOM

Wimbledon is the quintessential tennis tournament. Other tournaments might have larger purses, larger crowds, and more hoopla, but tennis at Wimbledon always seems to be played the way tennis should be. The grass, the pellite crowds, the strawberries and cream all contribute to making Wimbledon unique. NBC's coverage of the prestigious tournament airs every day this week and concludes with the men's finals on Sunday, July 9.

Steffi Graf is still the woman to beat. She won her first Wimbledon title last year, and, despite losing this year's French Open, she has dominated women's tennis for the past year and a half. Last year, she became only the third woman ever to win the Grand Slam — victories in the Australian, French, and U.S. Opens as well as at Wimbledon in the same calendar year. That's something even Martina Navratilova has failed to do. And the news for Graf's opponents isn't getting any better, because Graf is diligently improving her game. She practices continually and recently added a drop shot to her repertoire.

Navratilova skipped this year's French Open to prepare for Wimbledon, where she probably has the best chance of beating Graf. (She has won a total of eight Wimbledon titles, including six straight from 1982-87.) To beat Graf, though, Navratilova must avoid serving to her awesome forehand return. Gabriela Sabatini, who has beaten Graf before, could also challenge her. Sabatini deploys a bewildering variety of spins and a tricky change of pace, tactics that can present problems for a baseline player. Arantxa Sanchez, 17, from Spain, played a brilliant match to defeat Graf at the French Open, but she probably won't repeat this success at Wimbledon. Monica Seles of Yugoslavia, who also performed well in France, is a young player to watch. She is a giggling 15-year-old, left-handed player who employs a wicked two-fisted forehand.

Men's tennis currently lacks a dominant Graf-like player, so the field is wide open. Michael Chang, the 17-year-old Californian, triumphed over leg cramps to upset Ivan Lendl in a thrilling match at the French Open and went on to defeat Stefan Edberg in the final. Ivan Lendl is always a threat, but his game is questionable on a fast surface like grass. Edberg will be determined to defend the Wimbledon men's title that he won last year. Boris Becker could be due for another Wimbledon title; his Machiavellian manager, Ion Tiriac of beer-ad fame ("You crack me up"), has been tutoring Becker in gamesmanship. Mats Wilander won three of the four Grand Slam touraments last year; a 1989 Wimbledon title would make up for last year's miss.

Success at Wimbledon has rocketed some players into prominence. Boris Becker was a near unknown when he first won it in 1985. For others, the elusive Wimbledon title has come when it seemed almost too late. England's Virginia Wade, a contender for years, finally won the title with her storybook 1977 Jubilee-year victory, a few days short of her 32nd birthday. But some players have seemed to "own" their Wimbledon titles: Both Björn Borg (1976-80) and Navratilova (1982-87) dominated for years.

The excitement of Wimbledon lies in its potential for upsets amid a continuum of athletic greatness. This year's Wimbledon should be, as always, tennis at its best.

ON THE COVER Defending Wimbledon champ Steffi Graf remains the front-runner in the prestigious tournament, despite her loss in the French Open. NBC Wimbledon coverage airs daily through Sunday, July 9.

Fonda didn't leave hubby for Lowe

Q: Tell us the truth. Didn't Jane Fonda leave her husband for actor Rob Lowe? — T.L.

A: Jane claims that the linking of her name with Rob's has been purely coincidental. She and Lowe, for example, both attended the Democratic National Convention. Also, I ran across Jane at the Cannes film festival in France, while Rob was staying at a hotel nearby. Nonetheless, Jane assures me that she did not leave husband Tom Hayden for Lowe. "I haven't seen anyone at all," she told me.

Q: I'd love to see some of the great stars of the '40s and '50s again. Why doesn't someone put on a show so we could all enjoy some nostalgic moments? — G.O.

JANE FONDA
Isn't seeing anybody

A: You'll have your wish if you can get to London by Nov. 13. That's the night a bevy of beauties from the golden age of Hollywood will be appearing in a one-night extravaganza called "The MGM Ladies and the Hollywood Great Stars at Her Majesty's Theatre."

Among them will be June Allyson, Alice Faye, Ann Miller, Kathryn Grayson and Dorothy Lamour, and leading the gang will be Van Johnson.

Q: Although actor Nick Nolte looks pretty healthy on-screen, we hear he's a physical wreck in person. What do you think? — D.B.

A: I spotted Nick in the waiting lounge of a London airport. Except for the obviously expensive casual clothing, Nolte appeared to be just another of your above-average sportsmen. He actually looked pretty good for a man who's pushing 50. Nolte attributes his current physical well-being to his third wife, Rebecca, their 3-year-old son, and the fact that he lives far from Hollywood, in North Carolina and West Virginia. As for his former, hard-drinking days, Nick says: "I'm totally straightened out."

Q: Everyone is fascinated by the idea of Sean Connery playing the professor father of Harrison Ford in the movie, "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade." Is Connery really old enough to be Ford's father? — D.Z.

A: Certainly not in real life. Sean Connery is 59, while Harrison Ford happens to be 47 — a 12-year age difference. But it works on-screen because of Connery's more mature looks plus Harrison Ford's boyishness and some expert makeup.

Q: I enjoyed Sylvia Wallace's book about a Hollywood spa, "The Fountains," a few years ago. Is she writing anything new? — B.N.

A: The Amazing Writing Wallace Family are always writing. Sylvia is just putting the final touches on "City of Women," all about Los Angeles. Meanwhile, husband Irving Wallace's new one is "The Guest of Honor," just out.

Q: We import vodka from Russian but we were wondering whether the Russians make wine. If they do, how come we never see it in the U.S.? — L.Q.

A: According to Roberta Morrell, president of Morrell Co. Wine and Spirits, the Soviet Union is the fourth largest producer and consumer of wine in the world. The only thing they export, under an agreement with the U.S., is vodka. Ms. Morrell, who is in the Soviet Union now and has taken American wine with her, is hoping glasnost will change all that and we'll all soon be trying the Russian grape.

NICK NOLTE
'Totally straightened out'

Q: What's become of Grace Jones, the former disco queen who had a flourishing movie career for a while? — N.O.

A: I ran into Grace at the Cannes film festival in France. She mentioned that her movie career is "in development," though I thought she'd long passed that point. I suspect the lanky and charismatic Grace is simply not considered prime box-office, and that's why she's concentrating on preparing a one-woman stage show and making record albums.

Q: Which of the "new" companies in Hollywood seems likely to take over from the "old" heavyweights? — H.N.

A: I would put my money on Miramax Films. This company, headed by two brothers in their 30s, Harvey and Bob Weinstein, has just scored another coup. Not content with the smash successes of "The Thin Blue Line," about a wrongful murder conviction, "Pelle the Conqueror," which won an Oscar for Best Foreign-Language Film, and their current blockbuster "Scandal," they've got the Cannes film festival's No. 1 prize-winner, "sex, lies & videotape." It's their second successive Cannes first prize (the first was "Pelle"). Early predictions are that "sex, lies & videotape" will earn 10 times what "Pelle" earned — it's that hot. Also coming up on the Miramax schedule: "The Lemon Sisters," starring Diane Keaton and Carol Kane, and Molly Ringwald's new one, "Loser Takes All."

GRACE JONES
Not acting much

Q: Can you tell us something about Richard Dean Anderson, that hunk of a man on TV's "MacGyver"? Is he married? — F.D.

A: Richard, 39, was born and raised in Minneapolis. He's single, drives a brown jeep and is dying to meet actress Kim Basinger. Anderson tells me he's had two humbling experiences lately, both involving crashes of his pet racecars. Nothing like brushes with death to put things in perspective.

ON THE MOVE — Rumors around Hollywood are that Burt Reynolds and his wife, Loni Anderson, are moving permanently to Florida, and that he's giving up trying to be a movie star. I don't think any of this is true. Burt is still hoping to get the kind of part that will bump him up to where he was after "Deliverance" in 1972. And the talk about his moving comes from the fact that he's put his Holmby Hills mansion up for sale. The price tag? A cool $6 million.

Upbeat's the word for 'Generations'

By JOHN N. GOUDAS

Like "The Cosby Show," NBC's new daytime drama, "Generations," radiates a positive look at a black middle class family.

The Marshalls are definitely role models. They're tight-knit, supportive, hopeful and on the way up — eons away from the despair and sullen anger of the inner city ghetto world. The networks know that daytime viewers won't take too much reality, so the alernative is a shot of hope. The Marshalls are sending out the message loud and clear — "Look at us, you can do it, too."

Handsome son Adam Marshall (Kristoff St. John) graduated from college last month. Adam stands for optimism. "He's a pleasant, outgoing, smart guy. Easy to like and gets by on charm, kind of like me," says Kristoff, son of actor-filmmaker Kris St. John. Kristoff made his TV debut as young Alex Haley in "Roots: The Next Generation."

Working with his TV dad, Henry Marshall, in his flourishing ice cream business, Adam is about to show what brains, schooling and charm can do. The young black businessman is what the black community needs to see, at least that's the intention.

"I get along with whites," Kristoff continues. "In college, Adam spends time with Sam and Monique, two white girls from the Whitmore family, and he even moved in with them for awhile. Of course, they're friends, that's all."

This summer, Adam finds bigger game, unhappy Doreen Jackson (Jonelle Allen), a former singer and wife of a real estate tycoon, Martin Jackson (Rick Fitts).

Is charm headed for trouble? Adam won't disgrace the family, or blow his career. He may come close but role models don't disintegrate.

"Generations" upbeat style befits Kristoff. "I'm doing what Dad did," Kristoff notes. "I was born in New York City, lived for five years in Bridgeport, Conn., moved to Calabasas in the San Fernando Valley, then grew up in Venice, Calif., before a two year stint in India, where Dad filmed a documentary. I began as this cute little child actor with a giant smile and grew into a big boy through series like 'That's My Mama,' 'The Bad News Bears,' 'Charlie and Company' and 'Flip Wilson's Show.'"

Sharon Brown plays Chantal Marshall on 'Generations'

Like his dad, Kristoff has a movie property about Martin Luther King's assassination. Acting, movie making, working both sides of the camera are in the blood, thanks to Dad.

CHANNEL CHATTER

Sky Dumont (now that's a great name for an actor) is the latest cast addition to "General Hospital." He plays a handsome South American revolutionary who becomes involved with concert pianist Katherine Delafield and emerges as Scorpio's nemesis. Dumont was born in Argentina but spent most of his life in Munich, West Germany. His most recent role was the part of the Nazi officer Count Klaus Schenck von Stauffenberg (definitely not a good name for an actor) in "War and Remembrance." In case the name of his character doesn't ring a bell, Sky was the officer who wore an eye patch and carried the bomb into Hitler's headquarters in the assassination attempt on the Fuhrer.

Eileen-Fulton's character of Lisa in "As the World Turns" has been married more times than all the Gabors put together. However, in real life, Ms. Fulton recently was wed for the third and last (those are her words) time. The bridegroom is Rick McMorrow, a businessman. Eileen has been associated with the CBS soap for close to 30 years.

PLOT PORTENTS

Marco tries to tell Megan he loves her in "One Life to Live" but Megan turns to Max for love. Bo finds Chester's body in Austin's grave and finally believes Sarah. Asa gets a rifle and swears to kill Austin. Brenda tells Larry she's calling off the wedding.

Ava's disappointed in "Loving".

NBC's 'Gifted One' might get gift of more episodes after top 10 ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Gifted One," an NBC pilot not on the fall schedule, landed in the top 10 in the A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings, which means it might get the gift of more episodes.

NBC has so many hit shows, it barely had any room for new ones on its 1989-90 schedule, but Preston Beckman, director of audience research, said the demographics on "The Gifted One" were so good the show might get a second look as a possible mid-season replacement. "Good demographics" means a lot of women, 18-49, tuned in.

Pete Kowanko starred as a man with mystical powers looking for his mother while being pursued by a scientist, played by John Rhys-Davies, who seeks to capture him and study him.

NBC won the week ending June 25, its 53rd in a row, with an average prime-time rating of 12.3 to CBS' 9.3 and ABC's 9.0.

"The Gifted One" was the only non-repeat in the top 10, eight of which belonged to NBC, though ABC's "Roseanne" maintained its place at No. 1. NBC's "Dear John" had its highest ranking yet, at No. 3.

The top 10 shows of last week were: "Roseanne," "Cheers" NBC; "Dear John," "The Cosby Show" NBC; "Golden Girls," NBC "A Different World" NBC, "The Gifted One," "L.A. Law" NBC, "Empty Nest" NBC and "Murder, She Wrote" CBS.

ABC added "Coach" to the top 20, tied for 17th, thanks to its summer time slot on Tuesday behind "Roseanne."

Despite all the reruns, new summer series and original episodes of old series did not fare particularly well. CBS' "Doctor, Doctor" did the best, ranking 38th. ABC's "Hooperman" was 55th: NBC's new episodes of "Highway to Heaven" and a new episode of ABC's "The Robert Guillaume Show" ranked 58th and 59th, respectively. "Microcops," part of CBS' "Summer Playhouse," a series of pilots for series that weren't picked up, ranked 69th. And CBS' "Hard Time on Planet Earth" was 81rd.

Ivy League beginning has become big league television sports

Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK — On May 17, 1939, Columbia played host to Princeton in a baseball double-header at Baker Field in New York. Princeton won both games, knocking Columbia out of contention for the Eastern baseball title.

Although not much was made of it at the time, the second game was significant for another reason: It was the first sporting event televised in the United States.

NBC had a single camera perched on a 12-foot-high wooden stand on the third-base side of the diamond. It transmitted picture impulses of the game through a cable to a truck and from there to the 85th floor of the Empire State Building.

From there, the impulses were transmitted by NBC's experimental station, W2XBS, to viewers at Radio City, Madison Square Garden, a few advertising agencies and the homes of pioneer set owners. At the time, fewer than 400 sets, all of them experimental, existed in the world.

The experiment, which involved a crew of 16, cost NBC $3,000, a good sum in those days.

Bill Stern, the famous radio sportscaster, was the lone announcer. He opened by saying: "I'm not sure what it is we're doing here, but I certainly hope it turns out well for you people who are watching." Stern, without benefit of a monitor, had no idea what was being seen. Actually, strikeouts were about all that the viewers could follow. The players looked like flies, except the outfielders, who couldn't be seen at all.

Orrin E. Dunlop of the New York Times wrote: "It is difficult to see how this sort of thing can catch the public fancy."

But three months later, on Aug. 26, 1939, NBC again televised a sporting event, this time a major league baseball game between the Cincinnati Reds and Brooklyn Dodgers at Ebbetts Field, with Red Barber announcing. Dunlop was more impressed.

'I'm not sure what it is we're doing here, but I certainly hope it turns out well for you people who are watching.'

— Bill Stern, radio sportscaster

"Now the ball can be seen; the players are no longer white dots on the screen," he wrote.

And the sports television industry was on its way to growing into what it is today.

How much has it grown? Consider this:

•In 1960, CBS, NBC and ABC combined televised 540 hours of sports programming, which was only 5 percent of all programming.

•In 1988, an Olympic year, there were a record 1,848 hours of sports on the networks, nearly 20 percent of all network programming, plus, in any given market, at least 10,000 more hours on cable and local TV.

ESPN alone devotes 4,500 hours a year to sports events.

Not only are there sports on the national cable networks such as ESPN, TBS and USA, but also on newer regional cable sports networks such as Prime Ticket and Z Channel in Los Angeles; Madison Square Garden Network in New York, and at least half a dozen others.

Meanwhile, rights fees, in most cases, are escalating at an incredible pace as advertisers pour more and more money into sports programming.

General Motors spent $212 million on TV sports advertising in 1988, Anheuser-Busch $145 million.

There is tremendous pressure on college coaches to recruit top athletes because the winning teams get the most money. A college team that goes to basketball's Final Four gets $1 million.

But it pales in comparison to the money professional teams make off television.

The 28 National Football League teams this season will each get more than $17 million from television.

The 26 major league baseball teams will each make $9.9 million off national contracts with NBC and ABC. Beginning in 1990, they'll each make $16.2 million per season off new contracts with CBS and ESPN, plus millions more off local packages.

The New York Yankees, besides getting their share from the national packages, get a whopping $42 million per season from a new 12-year, $500-million deal with the Madison Square Garden network.

At those prices, some people have wondered why the cable network didn't just buy the team.

Television is the main reason the average salary of a major league player is $513,730, and that 20 players make at least $2 million per year.

Without television, baseball players probably wouldn't make much more than surgeons, or U.S. presidents.

Old-time boxing promoter Mike Jacobs predicted in 1939 that someday television might generate $1 million for a major championship fight. People figured Jacobs had lost his senses.

But Jacobs knew what he was talking about. He just underestimated the possibilities.

When Sugar Ray Leonard and Thomas Hearns fought to a draw June 12 at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas, the take from pay-per-view and closed-circuit television alone was more than $26 million, according to promoter Bob Arum.

A likely rematch would figure to generate considerably more.

And if the Super Bowl ever gets on pay-per-view? Some experts says the take could be in the $500-million range.

The NFL this year will enter the final season of its three-year deal with the three major networks and ESPN, a package that is worth a total of $1.5 billion.

In 1958, the Hughes Network paid $200,000 for NFL rights. In 1962, CBS paid $1 million. And this season, the total TV ante is around $500 million.

Then there is the prospect of pay-per-view. Some experts think that NFL games will be on pay-per-view television sometime in the 1990s.

Don Ohlmeyer, president of Ohlmeyer Communications and a former top sports executive at both ABC and NBC, said: "The Super Bowl now generates $35-$40 million. Compare that to the $500-$600 million it would generate on pay-per-view, and you're talking about a $500 million turnaround."

While widespread pay-per-view sports looms in the not-too-distant future, the money now being thrown around for broadcast rights is pretty impressive.

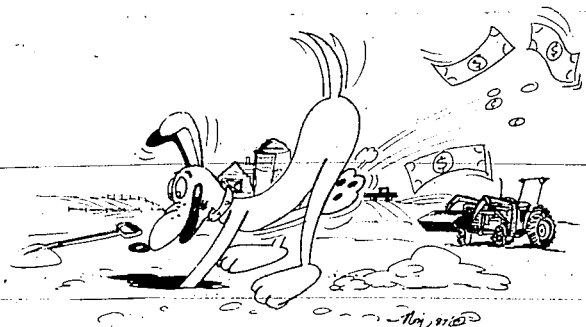

Last Dec. 14, CBS made a $1.08 billion deal with major league baseball. It agreed to pay that amount over four years, from 1990 through 1993, for the right to televise 12 regular-season games, the All-Star game, the championship playoffs and the World Series.

Three weeks later, ESPN agreed to pay baseball an additional $400 million for the right to televise 175 regular season games per season during the same span.

New television contracts with the NFL, the National Basketball Association, the National Collegiate Athletic Association (for both football and basketball), and the National Hockey League will all be negotiated late this year and early next year.
